School Values Related

"Aiding students in finding a value system is an imperative of the schools today," Dr. Herbert W. Schooling, dean of faculties of the University of Missouri in Columbia, told educators Thursday night at the high school cafetorium.

The occasion was the spring meeting of the Southeast Missouri Association of School administrators and the Southeast Missouri School Boards association. About 400 attended.

"The Establishment of a Value System as an Imperative to Education" was Dr. Schooling's topic.

If a school board were to formalize a systematic set of values, who would they consult, he asked. Would they ask the Pope? Would they ask community leaders? Would they ask the leaders of the Methodist church?

And if the school boards did find which values are desirable to teach would it be constitutional to teach them?

"These are questions that come to mind when we think of establishing a value system to teach," he said, but it should be pointed out that the school cannot help but influence the values of its students.

The teaching procedures, the actions of the school board, the social functions and regulations of a school say something about what it values, he said.

If a school board builds an athletic auditorium at the expense of needed improvements to the library system, that says something about what it values.

If the school is unwilling to support a kindergarten program, but spends money to stress sports, that says something about values, he continued.

"The schools can't escape the responsibility to inculcate a system of values," Dr. Schooling emphasized.

Quoting a news clipping, Schooling made the point, that if the educated man in the school systems is not willing to express standards, then what is the purpose of education.

The school must encourage students to develop a "human philosophy," he said. There must be planned opportunities for him to develop his philosophy.

The great need for students today, he cited, is guidance.

Schools have the obligation to develop values: to recognize honesty, beauty, integrity as lasting values.

The values are learned by experience, he continued. The schools must provide the right

Drought Area Shifts to Midwest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While the six-year long drought conditions in the Northeast have eased considerably, a lack of rainfall is posing a serious threat to farmers in the Midwest.

"Nothing particular to worry about now," says the Boston Weather Bureau.

"I'd go as far as saying the emergency here is gone," says New York City Water Commissioner James Marcus.

The talk is different in the Midwest.

"If it rains on a lawn in Kansas City, wheat drops a nickel," says a farmer. "We've had only a quarter of an inch since last September."

New Yorkers are looking forward to the possible lifting of some drought emergency measures still in effect like not being served a glass of water in the city's restaurants unless you request it.

Farmers in the Midwest are hopefully looking forward to bigger things, like early April rains to improve drought-stunted crops and erase the threat of dust storms and prairie fires.

The Northeast was helped by heavy winter snowfalls, which may have resulted from a shift in the normal pattern of weather coming from Canada and across the United States. The shift in the weather pattern likewise may have been the cause of the Plains states' lack of precipitation.

Meteorologists say cold Canadian air bypassed the Plains states and the Northwest, and instead ran east across the Great Lakes.

New York City reservoirs gained 4.8 billion gallons of water from melting snow and the city's water supply rose to a fraction below the normal level.

But south central Kansas has had less than three inches of precipitation since last fall when farmers seeded crops. The normal for the period is six inches.

San Angelo, in West Texas, had a 116-day dry spell until it received .04 of an inch of rain. Rivers and creeks in that section are almost dry.

Other sections of Kansas and Texas, and parts of Oklahoma, Colorado, Nebraska and Iowa are also in critical drought stages.

Unless substantial rains fall in the next two or three weeks there will be heavy losses in wheat and other grain crops, skimpy grass for livestock and more insect infections, agricultural experts report.

In New York, Marcus says that while the emergency is gone he is not sure the drought is over.

"We'll be in good shape in June," he says, "but it could be rough again in the fall."

That's why drought emergency measures, which also require a special ordinance to sprinkle a lawn and include a ban on home swimming pools, are still in effect. Marcus says no decision will be made on easing or lifting them until next month when the situation will be clearer.

Pennsylvania has lifted emergency conservation measures in the Delaware River basin.

The Philadelphia Weather Bureau says some dry areas remain in southeastern Pennsylvania, but that general conditions are improved and rivers and streams are above normal levels due to melting snow.

A storm now in Arizona is expected to ease the drought conditions in that state with more rain and snow at higher elevations forecast for tonight. Phoenix has received .68 inches of moisture since the first of the year. The normal for the period is 2.20.

Most of the 700 million inhabitants of Communist China reside in one-sixth of the country's 3.7 million square miles. They are crowded in the fertile plains and deltas of the east.

Car Hits Parked Farm Machinery

Two persons were injured at 9:35 p.m. Thursday on highway 53 near Qulin when a car crashed into farm machinery.

A 1960 Chevrolet, driven by Clinton Daffron, 40, Union, ran off the road on a curve, and struck a parked combine and tractor parked near the edge of a field.

The driver received internal injuries. A passenger, Ruth Harper, 25, Union was scratched and bruised.

Both were taken to a Poplar Bluff hospital.

In a two-car collision Thursday at 6 p.m. on highway 80, one mile east of East Prairie, Woodrow Tinnon, 54, driving a 1967 Oldsmobile started to make a left turn, when a 1964 Buick, driven by James Emas, 23, Cape Girardeau, was attempting to pass the Oldsmobile.

Neither driver was injured, but Tinnon was arrested for driving while intoxicated, according to the highway patrol.

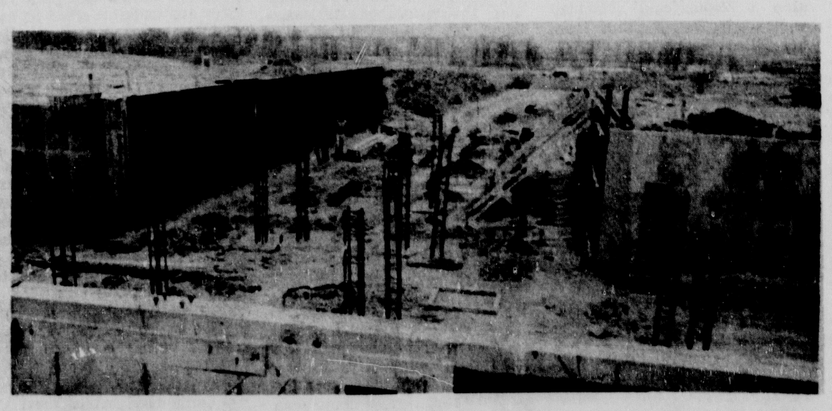
Homer Morgan Fund Chairman

DEXTER - Homer Morgan will serve as general chairman for the final phase campaign of the Dexter Memorial hospital.

Final phase has been initiated to raise funds needed for completion of the hospital. The second fund raising campaign ended last week with more than $92,000 raised.

The goal for the second campaign was $227,000. The final phase campaign will try to raise $135,000, the rest of the funds needed.

Construction of the hospital is progressing. Concrete for the basement has been poured but muddy ground has slowed construction.



CONSTRUCTION of the Dexter Memorial hospital is progressing. Concrete for the basement has been poured, and supports have been set. A new fund raising campaign has begun to raise $135,000.

Larger Course Favored

Country Club directors at an informational meeting attended by 40 members Thursday night received approval of plans to enlarge the club's nine-hole golf course to 18 holes.

Members voted to increase the dues from $144 per year to $180 per year. An increase of $3 per month in the fees will become effective January 1.

The club has 270 members.

The increase in dues will take effect if the plans for expansion of the golf course are carried out, William Sikes, board member said.

Club board members approached the city council March 6 with a request to lease property near the airport for expansion of the course.

Before any work can be done to expand it, Federal Aviation Authority approval is needed, a lease price must be agreed upon, and a layout of the tract of land wanted must be presented to the council.

Three representatives of the club reported at the March 6 meeting that The Sikeston Industrial Development Corporation and the FAA had approved the plan to lease 45 acres for the expansion.

It was decided at that meeting to confer with Fred Schultz, president of Canvas Product Co. to see if the enlargement of the golf course would interfere with the expansion plans of the company.

Cotton Acreage To Dip Again

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farmers have indicated they plan to plant fewer acres to cotton this year than last year, when the acreage dipped to the lowest level since 1871.

An Agriculture Department report made available today shows that farmers have signed agreements with the government to keep out of production 4,712,000 acres of their 1967 crop allotment of 15,776,800 acres.

The department is offering payments and price supports to those who divert at least 35 per cent of their farm allotment. The purpose is to hold down production until heavy surpluses can be disposed of.

The report thus indicates that this year's plantings will be about 10,064,000 acres compared with 10,353,000 planted under a similar program last year.

Tom Gilmore Will Pilot Young Democrats

Tom Gilmore

Tom Gilmore, assistant prosecuting attorney, was elected president of Scott County Young Democrats last night at the Rustic Rock Inn. He succeeds Bill Lewis.

Other officers chosen were Bill Burch, first vice-president; Bill Ferrell, second vice-president; Jim Green, secretary, and Pete Malone, treasurer. Chosen as state convention delegates were Lewis and Dan Norton.

George Burrus, Jefferson City, administrative assistant to the state director of revenue, eulogized the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt who once said:

"America will have to be led in the days to come by the youth. You will find that your fight against selfishness and injustice, against oppression, and above all, against war, will take you into a man-sized struggle."

"To prepare youth for this struggle," said Burrus, "the Democratic party was the first major political party to give official recognition to the place of youth in the affairs of the party."

Scott county officials present were State Rep. Tony Heckemeyer, Fielding Potashnick, prosecuting attorney; Aubrey Michael, collector; Jack Sides, probate judge; Gene Nunnelee, coroner; K. M. Streeter, committeeman, Sylvania township. Others present were Bill Burlison, Cape Girardeau county prosecutor and executive vice-president of the State Young Democratic club, and Frank Ferrell, Sikeston.

A resolution presented by Potashnick thanking Lewis for "fine work" was adopted.

Speaker Burrus said: "Since 1932 the role of young people in the party has constantly expanded. Today the leadership of our party is adding a new chapter to the history of the party, founded by Jefferson, strengthened by Jackson, challenged by Wilson, magnified by Roosevelt, saved by Truman, and inspired by Kennedy,

"There are many tasks we can perform to help our party. Among them are interest young men and women in problems of government, local, state and national; encourage young voters to take an active interest; provide a forum to discuss important economic and social issues; give young persons opportunity to become acquainted with candidates; participate in party affairs, as well as give leadership in political activities.

"Our own Governor Hearnes has expressed his interest in young people in Democratic affairs, he has encouraged its gorwth, and realized its importance to the parent party. To ignore politics you do so at a great risk as it will not ignore you. It will determine the taxes you will pay, the type home in which you live, the extent of your freedom, as well as many personal questions.

"Your influence on your community, state and nation, can be broadened through participation in young Democratic activities.

Chaffee Mayor Race Mounts In Confusion

CHAFFEE - Mayor H. G. Maxwell has requested that his name be taken off the ballot for the Chaffee city election Tuesday.

His opponent, R. H. Capshaw, who has filed for office, does not have his name on the ballot. Ballots were printed Thursday.

The law reads that a candidate's name cannot be stricken after the closing of the filing date, which was March 24.

Capshaw will run as a write-in candidate.

In a special election Tuesday voters approved annexation of the Capshaw property to the city of Chaffee so Capshaw could meet the residence requirement.

Bill to Transfer Parks Ironed out

WASHINGTON (AP) - The language of a proposed amendment to a Missouri bill designed to transfer some state parks to the National Park Service was worked out there Thursday by Missouri officials.

The bill pending in the Missouri General Assembly, would authorize the Missouri State Park Board to transfer Big Spring, Alley Spring and Round Springs state parks, near Eminence, Mo., to the federal government for inclusion in the Ozark National Scenic Driveways Area.

Court Blocks Rail Strike

CHICAGO (AP) - A federal court issued today a temporary order restraining conductors and brakemen from going out on a nationwide railroad strike.

Judge Richard B. Austin of the U.S. District Court issued the order at the request of the railroads.

The Order of Railroad Conductors and Brakemen had called a walkout for 12:01 a.m. Saturday.

Farm Product Prices Take Another Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farm product prices declined 1 per cent during the month ended March 15, continuing a downturn which started last September and which has stirred up widespread farmer unrest.

The mid-March farm price level was about 8.5 per cent below last summer's peak and 7 per cent below those for March last year.

They were about 21 per cent below the record high reached in February 1951.

In reporting the new decline the Agriculture Department said lower prices for hogs and milk contributed most to the loss.

Price increases for wheat and eggs partially offset the decrease.

The report of the lower milk price came at a time when the National Farmers Organization was conducting a 25-state milk withholding action in an effort to get processors to increase prices the equivalent of two cents a quart.

Prices paid by farmers increased one-third of 1 per cent during the month ended March 15 to climb back to the record high first set in January this year. Prices paid by farmers were 3 per cent above those of a year ago.

The department said that milk prices declined 2 per cent between mid-February and mid-March.

Pioneer to Join in Toast of Land Bank System

William A. Dickison of St. Louis, who participated in the growth of the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis during most of the 50-year history of the national system, will speak at a banquet at the Holiday Inn Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Dickison, a former president of the St. Louis bank, started his long career with the institution in 1924. He retired in 1964 after 40 years service and is now chairman of the board of the Missouri State Bank of St. Louis.

In the banquet, the Federal Land Bank Association of Sikeston is joining the nationwide celebration of the anniversary of the bank system.

Hal F. Robertson, association manager, said the occasion will pay tribute to "American Farmers: Providers of Plenty."

Howard Schneider, East Prairie, president of the association, and Robertson will make welcoming remarks.

A 50th anniversary cake will be cut and a bank film will be shown.

The banquet will be attended by officers and directors of the association, business and agricultural leaders.

The date of the banquet coincides with the chartering of the last of the 12 Federal land banks in the system. All of the banks were chartered between March 1 and April 3, 1917, under the provisions of the Federal Farm Loan act. The Federal Land Bank of St. Louis was chartered March 8, 1917.

The Association is a part of the sixth farm credit district. The district includes Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas and has 64 associations, providing long-term, low cost loans to farmers.

"Through its anniversary celebration, the federal land bank system hopes to acquaint every American with the efficiency of agriculture and the technological developments which have taken place, enabling the American farmer to produce food and fiber unequaled in any other part of the world," Robertson said.

He pointed out that the federal land bank of St. Louis has made loans of more than $1 billion to more than 168,000 farmers during the past half century.

Money used through the federal land bank system is not government money, Robertson said. It is secured through the sale of bonds to the investing public. All government capital originally put into the system has been paid back to the federal Treasury.

Denton Shot to Death

EAST PRAIRIE - L. I. Denton, 77, a retired grocer and large property owner, was shot and killed at 6:55 a.m. today at his home, Coroner Elgin McMikle said.

Being held in the county jail at Charleston for investigation is Louis King, 55, Denton's brother-in-law.

Denton was shot five times with a .22 caliber rifle as he walked to his gagare to get his car, McMikle said. The top screen from a storm door in King's house, behind the Denton house, had been removed, McMikle said.

Denton walked about 20 steps after the shooting began before he collapsed and died.

Mississippi county sheriff's officers, who investigated, reported that the two men and Mrs. Denton had quarreled often in recent years.

A coroner's inquest will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday. The body was taken to the Shelby Funeral Home.

War Deaths Rise Sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new savagery of the Vietnam war has propelled U.S. combat deaths to levels 66 per cent above last year's average weekly losses. Communist fatalities are reported up 80 per cent.

A study of Pentagon figures shows American deaths so far this year are averaging 160 a week, compared with 96 in 1966. Enemy dead the first 12 weeks of 1967 has averaged about 1,800, compared with about 1,000 last year.

Communist forces are suffering even greater casualties in proportion to their strength.

The military estimates the Communists have sustained 33,000 wounded in addition to 22,000 dead thus far this year.

Military spokesmen admit the count of enemy dead is far from precise, and at best a haphazard and sometimes extrapolated estimate of bodies found on the battlefield. The wounded count is pure guesswork. Nevertheless, officials believe the rough tally is useful in assessing the impact of the war on the enemy's force levels.

The toll of 55,000 amounts to nearly 20 per cent of the enemy's 1967 average strength of 281,000.

By contrast the over-all U.S. casualties the first quarter of this year — 14,100 including 1,916 killed and 12,184 wounded — represent 3.5 per cent of the

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

There are times when it appears that youth has lost its zip - the spirit of adventure, the desire to compete, the will to endure and succeed - giving up these qualities in a quest for security, serenity and certainty.

But all is not lost. Consider these two items reported this week in the news:

In Chaffee Richard Steimle looked down the street. It was nearly midnight. He called the attention of his wife to a tiny figure near the downtown region.

Investigating they came upon a 17-month-old girl clad in pajamas, clutching a rag doll. The tot ran into Mrs. Steimle's arms, crying "Mommie".

No one in the block knew the child. The little girl was put to bed and police notified.

Nine hours elapsed.

Then Mr. and Mrs. Mark Hopkins of Centerville, Iowa, visiting in a home three and a half blocks away became aware that their daughter, Amy, was missing when another daughter, Sarah, awakened.

Hopkins believes that Amy left the house to search for him. He had left the house after he thought the family was asleep to talk to a relative next door.

Amy never had opened a door by herself before but she apparently succeeded in doing it this time.

Through police the family was reunited.

Then there was the story of another young Iowan.

Light pounding on the front door awakened Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Severin in Charles City, Iowa, at 6 a.m. Severin went to the door groggily, not fully awake.

He awakened fully when he opened it. There stood four-year-old son, Richie, fully clothed. The boy had been last seen by his parents when he was tucked in bed.

The explanation?

The boy said that he had gone rabbit hunting. On his return he discovered that he had locked himself out.

Oh yes, his hunt was unsuccessful.

No spirit of adventure in youth! Our boys and girls have plenty of it.

The Colonel said: "Success does not mean happiness; it means an unusual number of enemies."

* * *

If George Washington paid for all the beds in which he slept it is doubtful if the nation's first president would have gone down in history as a wealthy man.

American cities have dug down deeply to pay for entertaining Presidents since Washington's day. Modern day chief executives have crossed the Potomac many times to visit every section of the nation.

Stone markers abound throughout the United States relating when Presidents visited just about every square inch of geography in the country. Cities visited have picked up the tab.

There is no marker in Lewiston, Maine. There is some doubt whether any President will visit that rock ribbed city ever again.

When President Lyndon B. Johnson called in Lewiston in September citizens there sent him a $784.77 bill to pay the cost of extra lighting the occasion required.

Perhaps the good but close fisted folks in Lewiston thought that Johnson could pay the bill with funds saved by turning off the lights in the White House.

If the White House digs down and pays the bill the door is wide open for other bills. This stampede for federal aid could produce more ulcers than foreign aid or the poverty war.

If Maine Democrats shell out what will happen to the national administration claim that Johnson came to Lewiston to make a non political talk?

Perhaps the Lewiston city finance board can be silenced by pork barrel funds for a pet community project without being compensated directly for the extra electricity used to shed light - political or otherwise - on the President's visit.

If the White House can't solve this problem surely the great, powerful and resourceful federal bureaucracy can handle it.

If there isn't any federal agency or agencies authorized to handle this community problem surely the bureaucrats can figure out something. They have never been known to be puzzled long about how to spend the American taxpayers' hard earned cash.

FLORIDA'S BATMEN

Voters in Florida elect a new state legislature on Tuesday (March 28.)

If it were not deadly serious, what is happening these days in Florida would be like something out of Batman. Gov. Claude R. Kirk, Jr., is enlisting a private army to fight a public war against crime.

There are those in the Miami area who would agree that the threat of crime is as extraordinary as Gov. Kirk's approach. The Florida Sheriff's Bureau on March 17 estimated that at least 100 Mafia big wheels are living in south Florida.

The election of a new legislature on Tuesday will provide a test of sorts for Gov. Kirk's appointment of the head of a private detective agency as his "general" in a statewide war against crime. The election was ordered by a three-judge federal panel which ruled on Feb. 9 on a new reapportionment plan for the law-making body.

Almost immediately after Kirk took office he hired the Wackenhut Corporation, the third largest private police force in the country, to follow up a campaign promise to rid Florida of racketeers. The firm is headed by George Russell Wackenhut, a 47-year-old former Federal Bureau of Investigation agent.

Gov. Kirk's hard-nosed, right-wing close personal friend, Wackenhut is reported to have made himself several times a millionaire out of the detective and private guard agency. He is nominally a $1-a-year man on the crime hunt for Gov. Kirk, but his company draws as much as $1,000 a day.

A feature of the Kirk policy distressing to some Floridians is that it is financed privately. Jack Nelson asserts in the Los Angeles Times: "Kirk's office reported that even before he was sworn in he was assured of adequate financing by business and industrial leaders, and that before he began actively soliciting, money was pouring into the war chest."

Naming no names, Sen. Edward V. Long (D-Mo.) declared on Feb. 27 that the United States is being threatened by the same practices that turned Germany into a Nazi dictatorship. He pointed out that private detective firms were being hired by political leaders to take the place of legitimate law enforcement agencies. And he warned: "The issue is that the American citizens' right to be left alone, the right of privacy, the right to be free from the fear that you are being wiretapped, bugged, or snooped in."

The private police concept is by no means limited to Florida. For one thing, Kirk says, "Conferences have been held with FBI officials, the Treasury Department, and Internal Revenue agents for the purpose of receiving their cooperation. All have shown a desire to join in a mutual effort to rid Florida of one of its greatest problems - organized crime."

Gov. Lester Maddox of Georgia on Feb. 27 also proposed using private funds to enable private investigators to fight crime, saying that sometimes "certain restrictions" keep law enforcement officers from being effective. Florida's Kirk consulted with Gov. Ronald Reagan of California on Jan. 13.

Reagan declined to be questioned about the meeting, but said that he had no plans for a private police force. However, a Reagan-backed bill in the California legislature would establish a public corporation against crime which would be financed by public and private funds. There's more than a fair chance that the Batmen will multiply.

HOW TO ENJOY YOUR WORK

Adapt yourself to your work. Perhaps you need to change your method, not your work.

Plan your work; work your plan. Lack of system produces that "I'm swamped" feeling.

Dont' attempt everything at once. Spread out your work. Follow Paul's example: "This one thing I do."

Get a correct mental attitude. Think your work pleasant and easy, and it will tend to be that way.

Become proficient. Study ways to improve. It's always easier to do a thing right.

COPPER SHORTAGE

Last summer, you may recall, there was a big to-do in Washington over the dwindling supply of copper in the nation's reserve stockpile of strategic materials. The department of Commerce directed private U.S. manufacturers to cut down on the use of copper in other products because it was needed for military orders. Now it turns out that, at the very same time, the Commerce Depargment issued licenses for export of more than $5 million worth of copper scrap to Communist Yugoslavia.

We remember the hue and cry that was raised - after December 7, 1941 - because some American merchants had sold scrap iron to Japan. But at least those deals were made before the war started. There's no such excuse in the case of last year's copper sale to Tito.

Also, we note that many other strategic materials beside copper are being sold to Communist regimes, with approval of our own government leaders, even though they are quite clearly things which help those Communist forces which our fighting men are facing in combat in Vietnam. These materials include various chemicals and chemical processing plants, industrial instruments, technical data and even electronic and navigational equipment for installation on Soviet-built aircraft. All this even before the Congress has acted on proposed legislation to increase trade with Communist regimes.

We fully agree with the Congressman, a member of the House Appropriations Subcommittee for Defense, who says it makes no sense to sell or trade such materials to other Communist regimes.

We fully agree with the Congressman, a member of the House Appropriations Subsell or trade such materials to other Communist regimes which are "assisting aggressors to kill and maim our soldiers in Vietnam." This is more than just foolish - it's downright treacherous.

A shortage of reserve stocks in materials for our own military needs is bad enough in itself. But even more frightening is the realization that official Washington would dare to ship strategic metals to the enemy through the side door while pressing American manufacturers to cut back on the use of such materials.

"Father you're trying to push one of the strongest groups in the country around so you'd better be sure of your muscle. Evidentaly you do not know that American teen-agers spend 14 billion dollars a year, own a fifth of the nation's automobiles, purchase over $500 worth of cosmetics a year. She called out to her father, who was not available at that moment. Ordinarily, I would have told her to ask the person to call back in 15 minutes. But absent-mindedly I told her, "Daddy is tied up now."

She dashed back to the phone and excitedly reported, "Mamma says daddy is tied up! Gotta go now! I can't wait to see how she did it!"

SUMMIT CONFERENCES

President Johnson's recent trip to the Far East is the latest sympton of a long-standing delusion which has bemused American foreign policy and public opinion. Few seem immune to it, from Presidents of the United States to "the man on the street," and those who are not deluded often feel they must go along with the myth for the sake of popularity. The myth is that summit conferences work, or have any meaningful place in dealings among nation.

Summit conferences are a reporter's dream. They splash headlines all around the world. Everyone seems to like to see the photographs of heads of state hobnobbing with one another, and everyone seems willing to read the meaningless statements of perfect accord that follow each meeting. Many get from this a comforting feeling that somehow international peace has been brought nearer by such gatherings.

But the actual accomplishments of summit conferences have been almost zero. At best, they have merely recorded common purposes already well known and understood by the governments of two friendly nations, while at the same time giving malcontents an opportunity to vent their spite against the leaders involved, as happened to President Johnson in Australia. At worst, as at Teheran and Yalta, these conferences have resulted in secret deals advantageous to freedom's foes.

As the leading nation in the world, surely it is time that the United States matured enough to dispense with these childish shows and get on with the hard task of saving freedom. Every summit conference throws a smoke-screen over the real issues, to no good purpose. HLH

NEW YORK (AP) — Many housewives yearn to be glamorous stars. Caterfina Valente is a glamorous star who aspires to be a housewife.

"If I ever should retire, I'll concentrate on being a housewife," she said. "I am very good at it."

She is so good at it that she has written a cookbook in German. It features Chinese dishes, her specialty.

It took seven generations of entertainers to produce Caterina, a performer of stunning brilliance whose versatility and industry lead her to be spoken of in show business with something akin to awe.

The slender, vivacious singer can belt out songs in 12 languages. She dances and plays the flute and guitar. She gives from 50 to 70 concerts a year in places as far apart as Sweden and Argentina. She makes a dozen to 20 television appearances a year in this country, Britain, Germany and Italy, and turns out from four to eight record albums.

She also tapes — in a West Berlin station, in Japanese —a disc jockey program for a Tokyo station and writes a syndicated fashion tips column.

"In my spare time I am also taking a correspondence course in photography," she said the other evening, resting in her room after receiving an ovation for her opening show in the Americana Hotel's Royal Box.

Caterina absorbed her many languages as a child while traveling with her Italian mother, Maria Valente, one of Europe's top comediennes.

"I had to learn several languages just to be able to talk to the playmates I met in the countries we traveled through," she said.

Caterina is married to Eric Van Aro, a German television producer whom she met and fell in love with when he was a music hall juggler. They live in an apartment in Lugano, Switzerland, but the singer feels she is lucky if she gets to spend three months of the year there.

Miss Valente offstage is warm, friendly and charming.

"Going up in this business is one thing, but staying there is much harder," she says. "It takes work, work, work."

To Caterina life means love and cheerfulness.

"With love you can make everything work," she said. "It is not difficult to love and give love. If you do that, you'll get love back yourself.

"I believe in smiling 100 per cent of the time if you can, too. You can reach so many things with a single smile —as long as you mean it."

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, the lady from Maine, was scrutinizing promotions in the air force reserve some time ago when she found a man, Col. Sam Goddard, being proposed for a promotion to Brigadier General although he had performed only one - sixth of the required time for such promotion.

There was no description of Sam Goddard appended to the proposed promotion. Sen. Smith asked the air force why he was being promoted if he hadn't put in the required period of service. The air force replied that Goddard couldn't take time away from "campaigning," so had asked for a waiver. Mrs. Smith asked why he was given a waiver, and the air force replied that he was Governor of Arizona.

When word got out that Sen. Smith opposed Goddard's promotion, there came a strong telegram from another Arizonan, named Goldwater, urging the Senate Armed Services Committee to confirm Goddard. Goldwater is a Republican, Goddard a Democrat; but reserve officers stick together regardless of politics.

Mrs. Smith, however, though also a Republican, remained unmoved by the telegram from her fellow Republican in Arizona.

"If Goldwater could put in his training time while campaigning for President in 50 states," she remarked, "I can't understand why Col. Goddard couldn't get in his training time while campaigning for governor in one state."

As a result, Goddard failed on his promotion. He is now up for consideration again.

PROPOSED PEACE MISSION

Some of LBJ's friends have suggested that he call in U.N. Secretary General Thant and Sen. Bobby Kennedy of New York, place air force one at their disposal and tell them to fly to Hanoi to talk peace with President Ho Chi Minh.

It would be interesting to see whether he would make any more concessions to Bobby than to Lyndon.

It's also suggested that the peace party might include Cardinal Spellman of New York, who helped get the United States bogged down in Vietnam in the first place; also ex-Vice President Nixon, the most eager-beaver war hawk of the Eisenhower administration.

NEWSPAPER STRIKES

Long overdue is a congressional investigation of the effect of labor unions on the decreasing number of newspapers in the USA.

There have now been either newspaper strikes or drastic union demands in New York in 1962, 1963, 1965 and 1966, with another strike now looming.

One prolonged newspaper strike caused the death of a great newspaper, the New York Herald - Tribune, which had molded American political opinion for almost a century.

At one time the AFL-CIO considered starting a national newspaper in order to present labor news fairly. It also advanced over $100,000 to the old Los Angeles news to keep it from folding. But simultaneously union demands have increased publishing costs to the point that newspaper after newspaper has had to fold or combine with its competitor. Obviously newspaper monopoly defeats labor's goal of news competition.

At one time Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N. Y., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, started a probe of newspaper monpoly but, like so many of Manny's other probes, it mysteriously faced away. No one ever knew what happened, and his law firm isn't telling.

PAN AMERICAN PUPPET

The state department is secretly pushing another bland and innocuous diplomat to become Secretary General of the Organization of American States when the term of Dr. Jose Mora expires.

Mora, one of the most ineffectual bureaucrats ever to hold down the all - important job of OAS Secretary General, will retire in 1968. There has been much discussion among Latin American diplomats of replacing him with a strong executive who would jump into difficult Latin American imbroglios and settle them before they become critical. This is what ex - President Carlos Davila of Chile did when he was head of the OAS; also Lleras Camargo, ex - President of Colombia.

Instead the state department wants to put up another ineffectual puppet whom it can control; namely, Gonzalo J. Facio, former Ambassador of Costa Rica.

TAX REBEL ASHBROOK

Rep. John A. Ashbrook, R-Ohio, continually rants about the importance of local and state governments, claims that they should be forthright and independent of the federal government. To this end local self - taxation is all - important -- in fact is the number one cornerstone of self-government.

Yet when Montgomery County, Maryland, adopted an income tax law, Rep. Ashbrook, who lives in the county, promptly returned the income tax form and made it clear he had no intention of paying it. Ashbrook went further and circulated a letter to all members of the House of Representatives, seeking to organize a concerted drive against paying the local income tax.

"Would you please let me know if you. . . would be interested in meeting at some later date to determine what should be done in face of this contention which is being made by Maryland officials," wrote Ashbrook.

Despite Ashbrook's drive, M. L. Jardeleza of the Montgomery county revenue office is standing pat.

"A resident," he says, "is defined as an individual . . . who maintains a place of abode within the county for a fixed statutory period."

Ashbrook has been living in Maryland for some time.

Character in New Orleans Kennedy Drama Worked For Top Mafia Chief

Dallas: -- Despite the histrionics of king-sized Jim Garrison, the eerie trail of the Kafka-like David W. Ferrie does not appear to lead to the tragedy of '63.

In 40 still-classified pages of the Warren Commission Report, Ferrie's path, instead, heads towards one of the land's most notorious of Mafia dons.

The secret record, established by ace FBI teams, discloses that Ferrie positively was in New Orleans the day a rifle spat fire and death from the book depository.

Ferrie, a pilot, in effect worked for Carlos Marcello, often referred to as the syndicate "boss" of Louisiana and described by the late Sen. Estes Kefauver as "one of the worst criminals in the country."

The manicured, bantam multi-millionaire Marcello is one of the 13 alleged Mafia high council who were picked up by New York police last September in a Queens restaurant.

Amongst those with him at the interrupted dinner was his intimate friend Carlo Gambino, long accused of being the Cosa Nostra's account executive in charge of labor. The ailing don, Carlo Gambino, has powerful influence over far-flung waterfronts and some construction labor.

His comrade-in-arms, Marcello, who once took a swing at an FBI agent, for many years had had influence over trucking and waterfront activity as well as gambling throughout the Southwest.

During one Senate investigation a witness testified that "we find their fingers (the Marcello mob) in Texas. . . and in Mississippi, Alabama. . . and up into Missouri. . .in the St. Louis area."

For almost two decades Carlos Marcello, estimated by police to be worth at least $50 million in real estate, motels, oil wells, shrimp boating and commercial enterprises, has been feuding with the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The Federals charged he was an alien and sought to deport him. The Federals also charged him with attempting to show he was born in San Jose Pinula, Guatemala, by allegedly forging a birth certificate. Some seven years ago the U.S. government actually flew him to Guatemala. But he returned. Then he was charged with other improprieties involving his birth papers.

Marcello came to trial during the week of Nov. 18, 1963. His learned counsel then was G. Wray Gill, who also spoke for him when he attempted to hit an FBI agent at the New Orleans airport.

The defense needed an investigator and all - around handyman for some of this work. They took on a weird character by the name of Dave W. Ferrie. The latter hit the road considerably on this case of government charges that Marcello had used a false passport. Ferrie took at least one trip to Guatemala.

Mr. Gill outpointed the government and Marcello beat the rap -- on Nov. 22, 1963.

The late Ferrie later told the FBI that he was just outside the courtroom when the jury acquitted Marcello. But Gill told federal agents that at 12:15 p.m. that grim day he talked to his office. One of his staff told the lawyer that Ferrie was right there. This was just five minutes before the assassination of Jack Kennedy hundreds of miles away.

This testimony conflicts but it does establish the dead Ferrie's alibi. It also proves how tangled are the skeins of this explosive bit of history. So many people, so many weird ones, so many easy mysteries to whip up.

And despite the criss-crossing of so many lives and so many deaths and so many evil ones, the case of Dave W. Ferrie proves one thing big Jim Garrison did not think of proving -- that is, there is far more to do on other fronts than has been done by this District Attorney.

He was elected to fight crime and keep law and order and not to go chasing deviationist shadows across the estuary.

Rockefeller, Percy Vows Saturday

CHICAGO (AP) — The wedding cake is almost ready, the fitter has taken her final tucks in the bridegemaids' dresses, and hotels have begun to overflow with celebrated guests for Sharon Percy's marriage Saturday to John D. (Jay) Rockefeller IV.

The mood is festive, for friends are as determined as the families of the attractive young couple — he is 29, she 21 —that the shadow of less than eight months will not mar this occasion.

"Many of us haven't been back here since the terrible time of Valerie's funeral," one close friend of the family said.

"Naturally, this is on our minds and it is on Sharon's too. As with all twins, she was very close to her sister," said the friend, as she spoke of the unsolved murder of Valerie Percy in the Percy's suburban home in Kenilworth last September 18.

"However, the whole family feels that this wedding is what Valerie would want for Sharon. They all feel very strongly that Valerie is with them now."

Although 800 invitations were mailed, Mary Jane Keiss, supervising the wedding details, has alerted caterers to prepare for 1,200 at the reception at Ida Noyes Hall. It follows the double-ring ceremony at Rockefeller Memorial Chapel on the University of Chicago campus.

On the campus where Sharon's father, Sen. Charles H. Percy, once worked his way through school, and in the Gothic chapel where Jay's grandfather, John D. Rockefeller Jr., built the carillon that will resound after the ceremony, the Rev. E. Spencer Parsons, chapel dean, went over details of the wedding.

"If 1,500 guests come I'm afraid 300 will have to sit where they can't see the ceremony," the minister said.

During the service, the Rev. Mr. Parsons will interchange passages of the Book of Common Prayer with the Rev. Robert J. McCracken, pastor of New York's Interdenominational Riverside Church. He performed the bridegroom's adult baptism. Sharon is a Christian Scientist, which has no wedding ceremony.

The Rev. Mr. McCracken arrived Thursday night, as did a host of Rockefellers, Percy relatives and friends.

The 13th floor of Ambassador East Hotel was sealed off by personnel employed by the Percy's to afford privacy to the 54 people in its 34 rooms.

On that floor, along with the bridal party, are Mr. and Mrs. Laurance Rockefeller; Mrs. John D. Rockefeller III, Jay's mother; much of the Guyer family, who are Mrs. Percy's relatives; and Prince Amyn A. Khan, the late Aly's brother, an usher. Sharon is on the private floor, too.

Security men permitted a dressmaker on Floor 13 to make alterations on the dresses purchased in New York two months ago and kept locked up until now.

The guest list is as secret as the designer of the bride's gown. However, the union of the daughter of Republican Percy and Jay, a Democrat among Republican Rockefellers, is attracting great figures in politics as well as business.

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower reportedly sent his regrets, but Michigan Gov. George Romney is expected, along with New York Mayor John V. Lindsay; Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and their wives.

Lynda Bird Johnson is expected to arrive today, too. Her boyfriend actor George Hamilton may arrive Saturday.

The two young ladies became friends when both were guests at Laurance Rockefeller's ranch in Wyoming. Sharon later introduced Lynda and George.

A small 5-year-old kindergarten pupil kept informing his teacher that he was going to get a baby brother.

One day his expectant mother permitted him to place his hand on her stomach to feel the movements of the unborn child. After that the boy didn't talk about his expected brother any longer, until one day his teacher inquired, "Say, whatever happened to that baby brother you were supposed to get at your house?"

The little 5-year-old's face saddened. "I think Mommie ate him."

During the business session Mrs. Kochel accepted the office of secretary-treasurer, formerly held by Mrs. Bettye McClarty. Mrs. McClarty's husband has accepted the pastorate of the Vanduser church.

The meeting was closed with prayer.

I was over 30 when I started college, and to my classmates, I was an old man. They were particularly concerned when they realized that I was older than many of our young instructors. One young friend said, "Doesn't it bother you being older than the professors?" "No, not really," I replied. "Whenever I get a low grade, I just go to see the prof and say, 'Look, son, what seems to be my trouble?'"

Food Prices Drop Again

NEW YORK AP - Food prices dropped again this week, with ham and eggs leading the list.

Pork supplies have been running nearly one-third larger than a year ago.

Supermarket pork prices are far lower than a year ago, and likely to remain so until summer.

Demand for eggs slowed after the Easter hodiday. Prices also are expected to stay low until summer.

There are about 5 per cent more hens in the country, and they are working harder. But they don't like hot weather, which is why egg prices will probably go up when summer arrives.

There also are larger supplies this spring of beef, turkeys and chickens.

Too, there also is slightly more milk, despite the spilt milk across the land.

Milk production started picking up in December, and March through July are the seasonally heavy production months.

Supplies of southern strawberries are increasing, and prices are dropping.

There are other signs of spring too, in the produce departments, with increasing supplies of asparagus, green onions, and in the Southwest, okra.

Cabbage, carrots, celery, lettuce, onions, potatoes and tomatoes are piling up, along with oranges, grapefruit, bananas, and on the West Coast, grapes and apples.

But canned corn and tomato prices have risen - short supplies.

A dear little old lady put down $1.50 at the Paramount theater window and demanded a loge seat for a showing of Dr. Zhivago.

"Sorry, ma'am," replied the cashier, "but that's not enough money. The lowest admission price for this particular movie is $3.50."

"So who is this Dr. Zhivago?" demanded the little old lady belligerently. "Some kind of specialist?"

Kenneth LaCroix.

Garner Helps Dogs Open Season With Victory, Smacks Homer

By Dan Spears

CHAFFEE -- In the opening game of the basekball season, the Sikeston Bulldogs tucked their first win under their belt by downing the Chaffee Red Devils 8-3.

In his first outing of the season, Senior starter Rudy Manley, flexed his muscles in hurling a six hitter at the Devils, two of the hits coming in the final inning with two men out. Manley retired eight batters on strikeouts. Smith was the losing ace for Chaffee. He went the route, allowing ten hits and striking out five.

Sikeston's Mike Garner, paced the victory with a first inning homer over the center field fence with one man aboard. His homer started the scoring for the Dogs, boosting them into a 2-0 lead. Before the inning was over two more runs were pushed across. The Dogs continued to add one in the fourth, two in the sixth, and one in the seventh, to round out their scoring.

Senior Wayne Limbaugh, and junior Carl Barnett, carried the big sticks for Sikeston, each collecting two doubles apiece.

Eichorn and Steimle led their team in hitting with a set of singles.

Chaffee made the scoring column in the third on two singles, an error, and a walk. Supplementing these two runs was a lone seventh inning surge which produced one.

Parma Invitational Down To Final Four Teams

PARMA -- Out of a field of 16 teams only four remain in the independent invitational basketball tournament and will battle for a berth in the finals tonight after taking victories last night.

Parma opened last night's action with a blistering 131-68 romp over Kennett followed by Gray Ridge's 127-94 win over Portageville. In the final game, The Daily Standard squad edged Sikeston's Rebels 85-64.

The high scoring Parma quintet without the services of two of its starters raced to a 28-12 first quarter lead and never let up, scoring 32-34 and 37 points in the final three periods for its victory.

Three host players scored more than 30 points. Leading the pack was All-America Lavern Garner with 44 points followed by David Sharp with 34 and Dwight Turner with 32.

Terry "Round" Turlington rolled in 28 points while teammate Frank Proctor added 14.

A well balanced scoring attack led the Gray Ridge squad into the semi-finals. Six men scored in double figures, five more than 20 points.

Leading the scoring for Gray Ridge was Larry King with 28 points followed by David Pyles, Jim Jones, Jerry Kelly and Bill Kelly with 21 each.

The victors raced to 28-26 first quarter lead but shot into a 61-41 halftime lead after holding down Portageville's offense the second period to 15 points while scoring 33.

Larry James took high game scoring honors with 37 points for Portageville. Teammates Van Amburg added 24 and Jim McMhon contributed 19.

It took an all-out team effort for the Daily Sikeston Standard basketball team to down the rugged and defensive minded Sikeston Rebels.

The Standard pulled to a 23-10 first period lead but fell back in the second period being outscored 30-18 and holding only a 41-30 lead.

Both squads played excellent defense as the Rebels held the Standard's squad to its lowest point production of the year, 85.

The Standard squad pulled to a 13-point lead after the third period opened but the Rebels fought back and dropped the lead to nine points twice in the same period.

Led by Jim Hart in the final period the Standard squad managed to pull out front by 20 points and insure the victory.

Hart ended the game with 21 points and high game honors while teammates Sam Tucker added 16 and Bob Miller contributed 12.

Charles Pardon topped the Rebels scoring with 15 points Ken Garner added 10.

Tonight's action will find the high scoring KWOC and Parma squads battling in the first game while defense is expected to tell the story in the second.

BIG EIGHT BASEBALL
By the Associated Press

A no-hit, no-run game was pitched by Bill Maddox of Kansas Thursday in a 3-0 baseball victory over Texas Lutheran at Seguin, Tex., in the Jayhawks' season opener.

Because it was a single game, Maddox worked a full nine innings. College doubleheaders are limited to seven innings each. The Jayhawks collected seven hits and profited by five Lutheran errors.

Missouri and Texas A &M, in a doubleheader at College Station, had to settle for a 6-6 tie after taking the first game through nine innings. Then Texas A&M won the second game 8-2, scoring five runs in the second inning.

Houston Baptist College had two eight-run innings in blanking Oklahoma State 18-0 in Houston. Seven of the 19 Baptists hits were for extra bases. Meanwhile OSU got only three hits off Ray Zaragoza.

Houston University downed Nebraska 6-3 with the help of three errors by Nebraska's third baseman, Bob Churchich.

Arizona State beat Oklahoma 9-2 at Tempe for the Sooners' sixth loss.

At Tucson, Ariz., Colorado defeated Iowa 3-0 behind the three-hit pitching of Taylor Tomey.

Hawks Drop Opener

SAN FRANCISCO AP - "We lost the game and it makes no difference whether we lost by 50 points or one," surmised player-coach Richie Guerin of the St. Louis Hawks who nearly won after benching himself.

If Guerin stays in Saturday night's game, the San Francisco Warriors had best beware, warned their own coach Bill Sharman.

San Francisco took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven playoff for the Western crown in the National Basketball Association chase by edging the Hawks 117-115 after building a 22-point lead on Thursday night.

When I Was A Boy

Since the publication of the late H. J. (Jack) Blanton's "When I Was A Boy" reminiscenes in book form in 1942, they have become increasingly popular. All the books have been sold, and are difficult to obtain. Because of the increasing demand for these articles, the Standard is reprinting them during the next few weeks in the belief that its readers, young and old, will enjoy reading about 70 to 100 years ago. Clip and save them.

THE FREE SILVER ER/

When I was a boy, one of the best-sellers in book departments was "Coin's Financial School." It purported to be questions by a seeker for truth about the free coinage of silver, and answers which showed what adoption of that policy would do for the common man.

Million of copies were sold. My father offered a copy, free of charge, to every person who paid his subscription to our paper for one year in advance. The demand was tremendous.

Only those who lived during the free coinage agitation have any idea what a hold it took upon the minds of people who were the victims of conditions, whatever they were, which contributed to hard times incident to the eighties and nineties. Readers of Coin's Financial School were convinced that most every economic and financial ill dated from the demonetization of silver.

William Jennings Bryan, who came to leadership of the silver forces by virtue of his controlling voice in the Democratic national Convention in Chicago, carried the war into gold standard citadels in the East and North, preaching the quantitative theory of money. By admitting silver to government mints and adding many millions of silver dollars and silver certificates as circulating mediums, he argued, money would become so plentiful that workers would get higher wages, farmers would get more for their products, and prosperity would spread to every nook and corner of the nation.

Wall Street and the bankers became whipping boys for Bryan and his followers. The fact that Britain had been on the gold standard through many decades was used as evidence that evils come of a conspiracy between British and American bankers which had culminated in the closing of our mints to silver.

Discovery of gold in Alaska in the late nineties resulted in tremendous additions to the amount of money then in circulation. Financial and economic conditions improved materially. The free silver sentiment went into decline, and gradually ceased to figure in national politics. However, the apostles of free coinage at 16 to 1 insisted that their quantitative theory of money had been vindicated by that flow of gold from Alaska.

Only those who lived during that era know what a hold William Jennings Bryan had upon millions of American people, mostly hard-run farmers and poorly paid factory workers. My wife had an uncle who was a great Bible student. He went from place to place, with Bible in hand, to prove from inspired passages that Bryan was the fulfillment of prophecies incident to the second coming of Christ. Policies Bryan advocated would, when adopted, be proclaimed, usher in the 1000 year era of peace and prosperity that was described in the Book of Revelations.

Bryan became the chief figure on Chautauqua circuits. He drew the largest crowds and was paid the largest salary. His addresses, however, usually proved disappointing, though devoted to higher standards of citizenship. This was because he talked in conversational tones when most of his hearers wanted to hear some of the oratory on which his fame had been builded.

To the metropolitan press and national magazines, all of which were relentless in their attitudes towards him, Bryan handed a tremendous weapon for ridicule and denunciation when he volunteered to assist in the prosecution of a Tennessee school teacher who was charged with advocating the theory of evolution.

Immediately following his very unexpected death, however, practically all the big newspapers and magazines paid tribute to the example he had set as a citizen and to his sincerity in connection with things he advocated.

The last time I saw William Jennings Bryan was when he shared his double seat on a Wabash train with Mrs. Blanton and me. He, too, had been to the annual Journalism Week banquet at Columbia and was lugging back to his Nebraska home one of the huge baskets of gifts each banqueter had received. We found him very companionable.

PRAYING FOR RAIN

In the middle seventies, when Hardin was Governor of Missouri, this locality, and most of the state, was invaded by huge swarms of grasshoppers. There is no living thing more voracious than a grasshopper or more difficult for a farmer to deal with. As the damage and danger increased, Gov. Hardin, who was a devout Baptist, called upon Missouri people to meet in their churches on an appointed day and pray for relief. On the eve of that day the grasshoppers vanished, and everybody heaved a sign of relief.

This recalls the old custom of praying for rain. It often was invoked when crops began suffering from lack of moisture. I remember particularly a meeting that was held in Paris, Mo., when I was a boy. Farmers flocked in from far and near. As the hour for prayer approached, a dark cloud formed in the northwest and began spreading across the sky. Within a few minutes rain was falling in torrents. The meeting was converted into a praise service, with prayers of thanksgiving to God for what was happening on the outside.

I gained nation-wide notoriety for a headline across the top of my first page during the first Roosevelt administration. The crops were suffering from a prolonged run of heat and drouth. Disaster seemed just around the corner. My headline, in 60-point type read: "Lord, we confess our sins, We ask forgiveness. We pray for rain."

While the press was still running, rain began to fall. The drouth was broken. The crops were saved. Instead of thanking God, however, the people thanked me. At every turn for two or three weeks people stopped to shake my hand and express appreciation for that headline. Unfortunately for me, the rain kept falling. It continued through September, October, and November. As the rainfall increased, my prestige decreased to a point where I took the other side of the street when a farmer approached. By the first week of December people looked upon me as Public Enemy No. 1. Most of their lespedeza and soybean harvest was not possible until January.

There was a lesson in all this, which was that God still hears and answers prayer.

LARGE FAMILIES THE RULE

When I was a boy large families were the rule. Eight to ten children were not considered worthy of special mention. A good many families had more. There were five boys and five girls in our family, eight of whom were taught the printer's trade and used, as needed, for setting type and running presses in my father's newspaper plant.

In our home, as in most of the others during the seventies and eighties, there were only two outside doors. One, in front, opened into the parental room. The other, in the rear, opened into the kitchen for the convenience of those who carried wood and water into the house and for those who carried the ashes out.

Those of the children who were away from home after dark had to use the front door. This enabled our mother to keep a check on things. The lamp, with wick turned low was kept burning until the last son or daughter passed through on their way to bed.

Most of the houses were too small, judged by the modern policy of a room for each child. In our home east of the courthouse during the early eighties, the four older boys, including myself, slept upstairs, occupying two beds which were set on opposite sides of the room.

During the marble season, when every body's pants pockets bulged with what had been won in games of keeps or acquired by barter, I became wide awake at 4 o'clock one summer morning inspired by the crowing of our family rooster, I began amusing myself by imitating him. Finaly my other brother, Charley, who later became famous as editor of the Sikeston Standard, picked up his trousers and said: "Now, you little devil, if you do that again, you'll get something you don't like." After a dignified pause, I crowed again-- and Charley let fly, just as Anderson, who shared the bed with me, sat up to see what all the fuss was about.

Mistaking him for me, Charley hurled the marble - laden pants directly into his countenance. Anderson's shrieks could be heard all over the neighborhood. It was only a matter of minutes until my father and mother and most of the others were at the scene, demanding an explanation. When the facts came out, I was adjudged guilty and given a whipping that will never be forgotten. But what was tragedy to me at that time became comedy for the family during many future years.

The trundle bed was a necessary piece of furniture in most every large family. It was so constructed that it could be rolled under the parental bed in the morning and hauled out for use every night. Two or three of the youngest children occupied it. Only those whose memories include the comfort, safety and assurance incident to sleeping in a trundle bed, with father and mother just a few feet away after lights were out and darkness impenetrable, know what life in a trundle bed really was.

VISITING BOY FRIEND ON FARM

When I was a boy the biggest experience, next to riding a railway coach, was a visit with a boy friend out in the country. The town boy usually was more or less a nuisance to the hosts because he so frequently upset the regular order, and was so inefficient in his attempts to be useful.

I recall a week of romance, comedy and ragedy in which I figured out on the Jere Baker farm, southeast of Paris, Mo. My mother hesitated about letting me go, but yielded when Mr. Baker said he would treat me as a member of the family instead of as a guest. He did. And this explains why I thinned corn, drove cattle to distant watering places and helped at keeping the kitchen woodbox filled.

In fact, I tried to do everything Mr. Baker's son, Charley did; partly because of the novelty of the jobs, but principally because the sooner he got them done, the more time he would have for play.

The first day out, Charley inveigled me into riding the cow home from an outlying pasture. As she passed through the gate, I sprang upon her back from the gatepost and had the thrill of my life hanging on while she made a dash for the barn lot. All would have been well except for all the bars being down except the top one. The cow went under it in a sort of dive, brushing me off like a fly. Mr. Baker started to scold about thus using a gentle milk cow for a circus stunt but ended up with a boisterous fit of laughter at the plight in which I found myself.

Charley milked the cow and gave me the first lesson in that fine art. He always drank a cup of the warm milk. We wasted a lot more trying to see which of us could get a stream of milk in the other's mouth at the longest distance. It was pretty messy fun. Mr. Baker did not approve of it.

The family home was small and the family was large. Charley's quarters were in the attic. He reached them by climbing a ladder. I was assigned to a place in his bed during my stay. Climbing that ladder and plunging into the waiting feather bed every night was the biggest sort of thrill. And no sooner would we get into bed than a debate would start on the subject of which was the most important place in the scheme of things, the town or the country. We never reached a conclusion, however, because Charley's father always got tired of our arguing and yelled for silence.

There was a preliminary to our departure for the attic which I shall never forget. It was the family prayer. Attendance was mandatory. Every member of the family and every visitor was there. After reading a chapter from a very large Bible, Mr. Baker would kneel. All the others knelt, too, through the very fervent prayer he would offer. A reverent silence prevailed as we rose from our knees and made off for bed. That was my first introduction to the family altar. It is a institution that could be restored with profit to modern home life, provided it were possible to assemble a modern family under one roof at one time.

The tragic part of my visit came on Sunday. I prevailed on Charley to go swimming in the near-by river, which was contrary to Baker family rules. There was a saw mill near where we went in. From it we procured a large slab apiece, on which we were paddling downstream and having the time of our lives when a sudden whoop out the bank spoled everything. The whoop was emitted by Mr. Baker, who also was cutting a very wicked looking switch from a convenient hickory tree. While Charley was getting such a whipping as only righteous indignation would inspire, I began skulling through the timber towards the house. As I looked back to see whether Charley had been killed, Mr. Baker shook the switch in my direction.

"Just a little more provocation, young man, and you'll get some of it, too!"

Thoroughly terrified, I hurried to the house and asked Charley's mother what to do. She advised that I hurry out to the barn and wait until things had calmed down, which I did. Early in the afternoon she sent my dinner down by Charley, by supper time the incident seemed to have been forgotten, though a sense of guilt overtook me as we all knelt that night and Mr. Baker prayed for those who did not remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy.

Report Booming Vehicle Registration

Vehicle registrations should exceed 106 million within the next decade, according to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. This fact, coupled with new vehicle sales expected to climb and continue at 9 to 10 million per year, makes the car wash franchise owner happy anticipating continued future growth.

A current trend in auto laundry equipment is an automatic system that will wash a car in two minutes while the driver remains in his vehicle. One such manufacturer, Kwiki Systems, Inc. Leawood, Kansas, offer individual franchisees automatic equipment featuring a stainless steel traveling arm that moves around the car electrically on an overhead track, as five spinners shower the car with detergent and rinse water. The charge for an automatic car wash is 50¢ and since each car requires two minutes to clean, the franchisee can earn up to $30 per hour, day in and day out, according to Kwiki Systems.

For Do-It-Yourselfers: Instant Air Pollution

(third of four articles)

"Get your compact, portable, do - it - yourself air polluters today. . ."

It would be pretty hard to sell cigarettes with a line like that, the Missouri Heart Association agrees, but that's actually what every cigarette smoker is buying to feed his habit -- a do - it - yourself air polluter.

Ironically, the millions of Americans who smoke a pack or more a day are among those who are concerned with the health menace of air pollution in our communities. But they have overlooked the fact that, as Dr. William B. Kannel of Framingham, Massachusetts, put it, "smoking cigarettes is the most intense form of self-induced air pollution possible."

Doctors attending a conference on Air Pollution Medical Research in Los Angeles last year held that smoking is more harmful than industrial air pollutants.

The way in which personalized air pollution attacks lung tissues has been demonstrated in the laboratory. As the American Heart Association points out, nature has provided the normal respiratory system with a self - cleansing action that protects the lungs from harmful substances. In this system, the trachea and bronchial tubes (the windpipe and its branches) are lined with cilia -- tiny, hairlike projections of tissue that move constantly, sweeping impurities out of the respiratory tract.

But when tobacco smoke is inhaled, with its mixture of gases, tars, and other irritants, the cleansing action slows down and, in time, may even stop. This allows smoke particles, dust, tars, smog chemicals and bacteria to irritate the lungs and throat, establishing a foothold for disease.

That tobacco smoke immobilizes the body's defenses against infection was demonstrated recently in a series of experiments at Harvard and Boston City Hospital. The high correlation between heavy cigfection in chronic bronchitis led doctors there to investigate the relationship. They found that the body's anti- bacterial mechanisms were put out of action by brief exposure to cigarette smoke. A few puffs of smoke, they found, were enough to keep bacteria alive and thriving in an antibacterial culture that would have killed them off otherwise.

Both laboratory and statistical data furnished still another kind of evidence, on the optimistic side of the ledger. Biopsy studies of ex-smokers showed that some of them had pre - cancerous lung cells at the time they stopped. In those who had not yet developed cancer, the abnormal cells disappeared over a period of years and were replaced by normal, healthy cells.

Statistical data are even more encouraging. Among people who give up smoking, the death rate declines rapidly until, after a few years, it is nearly the same as that of people who never smoked.

"The beneficial effect of stopping smoking appears to be immediate, even if one has been smoking for years," says Dr. Samuel Proger, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Medicine at Tufts University School of Medicine. "I know of no other situation," he adds, "which we can associate with serious increases of coronary heart disease and which, when corrected, has been proved to show a demonstrable improvement."

Cape Ponders Commuter Air Service

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Cape Girardeau may have a new commuter -- type airline soon.

Sun Airline Corp. of Rolla has announced plans to start twice-a-day cargo and passenger flights April 10, pending Municipal Airport board approval.

"Included in the daily schedule," said Airline President George Caleshu, "are flights directly connecting Cape Girardeau with Jefferson City, Paducah, Ky., and Carbondale, Ill."

Caleshu is flying into Cape Girardeau Monday to discuss his plans with airport board members. He must obtain their approval before service can begin.

When final plans are activited, Caleshu said his airline will furnish regular flights throughout Missouri, in southern Illinois and eastern Kentucky.

"Service begins Monday in central and northwestern Missouri," he said. "And within two weeks we plan to begin serving the three - state area."

Other cities to be served include St. Louis, Kansas City, Joplin, Columbia, Springfield, Roll and St. Joseph.

The airline flight operations will be what the Civil Aeronautics Board terms a third-level airline. This means the airline does not need CAB approval. It is regulated only by the Federal Aviation Agency.

Madrid Group Adamant on Pond Study

CHARLESTON -- An attempt to have a study made of ways to improve the Ten-Mile Pond watershed struck another snag Saturday, despite efforts of Governor Warren Hearnes to mediate a dispute between Mississippi and New Madrid County officials.

Representatives of the two counties met Saturday at the Charlestonian, with the Governor acting as moderator, and heard R. H. "Bob" Landers, area engineer with the Soil Conservation Service, Cape Girardeau, describe steps that would be taken before recommendations made in such a study could be implemented.

New Madrid County interests headed by A. C. Riley of the St. John's Levee District, have been adamant in their refusal to discuss the Ten-Mile Pond watershed study. Riley told the group Saturday that the people of New Madrid County did not want runoff water from Mississippi County coming through their drainage system.

He alleged that once the New Madrid County Court signed an agreement to permit the preliminary study to be made, it would be unable to veto any work that might be recommended by the study.

MISSISSIPPI County Presiding Judge Bill Winchester introduced Landers, who assured the group that under Soil and Water Conservation Service Procedures, the county court would have a chance to disapprove the survey, and by doing so, would block further development of a "work plan" by his agency.

Landers' assurances apparently failed to impress the New Madrid County group, as no agreement was reached during the meeting.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

SYMBOL OF FAITH

To the world's 400 million Moslems, the beautiful prayer carpets of Islam are symbols of faith. The faithful are called to pray five times a day wherever they might be because all the earth belongs to Allah. The thing that marks off the prayer site as sacred is the prayer carpet.

The call to prayer is one of the five "pillars" or principal acts of faith of Islam. Islam means "submission" to the will of God, and a Moslem is "one who submits."

Islam, the newest of man's great universal religions, was founded early in the seventh century by Mohammed, who was inspired by the Jewish and Christian worship of one God.

Christ's gift to youth...

CONFIDENCE!

Did you ever notice that young people who have an unshakeable faith in their immortality are seldom gravely troubled by the doubts and insecurities of youth?

Their minds accept without question the promise made by Christ of another and eternal life to which this one is only a prelude. And this faith is a balm to the spirit . . . the surest cure for anxiety that man has ever known.

Surely, if you thought that this life, with all its tribulations, was the only life . . . how could you ever find the lasting happiness that man naturally longs for?

Many young people today do not wholly accept belief in God. Many do not believe unreservedly the teachings of Christ. Most often, it's because Christianity has never been clearly explained to them . . . or because they have been bewildered by varying interpretations of Christ's word. As a result, millions of our young people are denying themselves spiritual comfort and confidence during the years when they need them most.

Study the original teachings of Christ!

Through Peter, the first Pope, Christ founded the Catholic Church which, through the centuries, has passed along His teachings to mankind.

When you study these teachings, the meaning of your existence on earth becomes clear . . . and with this understanding, you may find the "faith that makes man whole" . . . and the solace of knowing your soul will live forever.

Victory Over Death

Easter is over but there remains an afterglow of truth and reality. Dr. F. B. Meyer, a great Christian of another generation expressed part of this reality in a letter he wrote to a friend a day or two before his death, "I have just heard, to my surprise, that I have only a few days to live. It may be that before this reaches you I shall have entered the palace. Don't trouble to write. We shall meet in the morning. With much love, Yours affectionately, F. B. Meyer." It takes deep communion with a living Christ to achieve such a personal victory as Mr. Meyer had reached. Worship helps. We invite you to worship with us at Trinity Baptist Church, 110 E. Center Street, this Sunday, at 10:30 a.m.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: I was interested in the letter from the West Virginia reader who wrote that she was afraid to be around women at work who had had cancer operations. The writer said she knew it was crazy but she just couldn't help it.

I, too, have a fear of cancer, but my story is different. Please print this letter because there are thousands like me and we need the moral support and understanding of the public.

Three years ago I was operated on for a malignancy. The doctor praised me for coming in at the first sign of trouble. He said I was very wise and very lucky. He assured my husband that the operation was a complete success and said we shouldn't worry. He told me that if I get through five years without a recurrence I could consider myself cured.

I have two years to go and my mind is never at rest. Every day I look for cancer symptoms on my own - hoping and praying I don't find any. At night I go to bed with a prayer, "Dear God, please let everything be o.k."

My children are still in school. My husband is not in the best of health. They need me. Every day is precious now. My burden, and the burden of those who share my problems is heavy. The thought that some people are afraid to be near me is demoralizing and depressing.

Medical science has made tremendous strides in the fight against cancer but there is still so much ignorance - like that of the woman from West Virginia. Your column has educated millions of readers on subjects people don't want to talk about. Will you please print this letter and ask for compassion and understanding for those of us who are fighting a very difficult battle? - A LADY FROM OHIO

Dear Lady: Here is your letter and I am asking for more than compassion and understanding. I am asking for money.

Cancer research is costly. Education and services must be paid for. Each and every one of us has a personal stake in the battle against cancer. Fortunate (and rare) is the family that has not been touched by this dread killer. About 50 million Americans now living will eventually have cancer. This is one out of every four persons in the United States.

I urge everyone who reads this column to respond to the appeal of the American Cancer Society. And be generous, please. Your contribution means the difference between life and death. - ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I was very much interested in the letter from the Cleveland woman whose husband has been begging her to accept a mink coat for her 20th wedding anniversary. She said she was going through the change. The hot flashes were driving her crazy. "I don't need a mink coat," she moaned. "What I need is a fan."

I have been married for 21 years and I have been wanting a mink coat for a long time. I live in San Francisco and the weather can get pretty chilly out here. Please tell the Cleveland woman that I will gladly send her a fan if she will send me the mink. - BAY AREA SHIVERS

Dear Goldie Goodheart: Here's your letter and lotsa luck. If we don't get a response out of Mrs. Cleveland, how about trying for a hot water bottle?

M-Missing.

I actually did run into a door and had a beautiful shiner on the night when my husband's poker club met at our house. As I walked through the room where the game was just starting, the men all stopped talking to stare at my eye.

My husband regained their attention by remarking, "We almost didn't have our party here tonight . . . "

The other men all looked at him with what I can only describe as pure admiration.

RENTICARE vs INCENTIVE

Before the year is out, many thousands of Americans will be moving into new or freshly renovated apartments. They will enjoy the wall-to-wall carpeting, the electric garbage disposal units and other niceties. These individuals will have special reason to enjoy their newfound comfort. The reason why is that the niceties will be paid for by the taxpayers.

The reference here is to the beneficiaries of the Great Society's rent subsidy program, sometimes known as Renticare. Under this program, poor families - or, in some cases, mothers with illegitimate children -- will move out of the slums into taxpayer - financed housing. To qualify for this handout, a family must not have an income above $4,300 a year. The head of the household pays a fixed percentage of his or her income for rent; Uncle Sam pays the rest.

President Johnson says that Renticare is "the single most important breakthrough in the history of public hosing." It would be more accurate to describe rent subsidies as the single biggest blow at self-reliance in many a year.

To be sure, there is rising congressional opposition to the plan because of the increase in the cost of defending Vietnam. But it will be a shame if opposition to renticare is based solely on the general cost of government this year. Renticare is not only costly; it is wrong.

Why does one reach that conclusion? The answer is that a rent subsidy gives a man or woman a stake in being a ward of the government. If a bureaucrat gives a person a comfortable apartment with wall-to-wall carpeting, it isn't reasonable to suppose that a former slum dweller will want to leave such comfort and try to make a place for himself on his own.

We know from the record of welfarism in the United States that the army of welfare careerists is growing year by year. A New York World Journal Tribune writer recently cited the case of a woman reliefer in New York City who openly admitted intending to take society for a ride in getting relief and other welfare benefits. The result, as the World Journal Tribune writer said, is an "unconscionable drain on your taxes and mine."

Renticare is the ultimate for welfare careerists. Once on renticare, one can be sure that a public dependent will never get off unless forced off. Rent subsidy strikes at the incentive system of our society. If there is no need to work for the comfortable things in life, many people -- the drone element, at least -- simply won't work.

Rent subsidies should not be thought of as a small program. The Wall Street Journal reports that the program could cost up to $6 billion. As this money is spent, it will eat into the morale of our working people. What is John Doe, an industrial worker, to think about such a program? In all likelihood, he works as many hours as possible in order to get ahead and give his family a higher standard of living. Not every hard-working American enjoys wall-to-wall carpeting and electric garbage disposal units. If he sees a drone family given things he can't afford on the basis of his work, he is likely to become infuriated with the workings of his society. He will feel cheated, and rightly so.

Hard-working citizens are cheated by Great Society planners and administrators when more is given to non-workers and drones than a working man can buy through his own labor. Indeed it is outrageous that productive citizens should be penalized so that non-productive people can have a free ride at public expense. Rent subsidies violate, therefore, the basic operational concepts of our free enterprise system. They strike directly at the concept of work and monetary returns in accordance with the amount one works.

The Wall Street Journal points out that at the end of last year in one of the big slum areas of Cleveland where renticare is operating there were more than 10,000 unwed mothers and 33,000 illegitimate children receiving welfare aid.

Why is the Great Society pushing the renticare program? Well, it seems that there is more to it than meets the eye. For example, if the bureaucrats can place slum families in middle - class apartments, they have the power to upset and juggle neighborhoods, which is what they clearly want to do. Statements by Harold Howe II, U.S. Commissioner of Education, make plain his determination to break up the neighborhood school system. One way of doing this is by busing of students. Another is by directly tackling the neighborhoods by sending slum families into the suburbs. Anyone who doesn't believe the masters of the Great Society wouldn't go this far in shattering our national way of life simply hasn't read the fine print in the Great Society programs. Renticare thus not only strikes at self-reliance but is a tool for breaking up the patterns of existing neighborhoods.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE

By Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE T.V. BANDIT

"Midnight Max" stole TV sets from motels. Well dressed and with a lilt to his walk, he'd register at a motel under a false name, and guzzle down a drink or two, courtesy of room service, until the stroke of midnight. Then, with all the grace of a more dignified jewel thief he would depart the motel through the nearest window with the TV set that had graced his room neatly tucked under his arm. When finally caught, Max had more television sets in his house than Chesterfield had cigarettes.

Charged with burglary, Max insisted that the case be dismissed.

"I can't be convicted on that charge," he told the judge. "I know the law. Burglary requires a breaking and entry. Well! The fact is I never broke into a motel in my life. I was always ushered in with all the pomp and ceremony of any other nattily dressed guest."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you let Max off the hook?

This is how the judge ruled: Max went to jail. The judge held that it is as derelict to trick one into an entry as to shove one's fist through a glass door, though the latter may be more hazardous and painful.

TODAY'S LEGAL POINTER:

A telephone number is often represented to be a valuable "asset" of a business when the business is being sold. However, don't bank on being able to obtain that number for sure if you buy the business. While a telephone company will frequently permit the number to be transferred upon a sale, the number, technically, is not an asset of the business. When a telephone subscriber is assigned a number, he does not acquire a property interest in that number.

Missouri Senators Ask Land Tax Amendment

WASHINGTON - Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) and Sen. Edward V. Long (D-Mo) have requested an amendment to the internal revenue code to allow for more equitable tax treatment for landowners forced to sell their property by condemnation or threat of condemnation for government programs such as flood control reservoirs and road construction.

"The purpose of this proposal is to broaden the types of replacement property which could qualify for deferall on capital gains tax," the Missouri Senators reported.

"Often the value of the land taken has been built up over many years, or even generations." The Senators said further that "We do not believe it fair to force the sale of property and then insist on payment of capital gains taxes when it is practically impossible for the owner to buy suitable replacement realty in the general vicinity."

Under the present law, in order to postpone the payment of capital gains tax, a landowner's choice of replacement property is limited to real property. The Senators' amendment would permit the landowner to make unrelated income producing investments where it would be impractical or work an undue hardship for the seller to buy real property.

Patterned after a recommendation made in the 88th Congress by a House Public Works staff study, the Missouri Senators said that they hope their proposal will meet previous objections from the treasury department, thus improving chances of passage in Congress.

The amendment will be added to Title VIII of S.698, introduced on January 26 by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (D-Me.) and soon to be taken up by Muskie's intergovernmental operations subcommittee.

Chemist Discounts Narcotic Effect of Banana Peel Smoking

RIVERSIDE, CALIF. (AP) -A University of California chemist says the effects of smoking baked banana peels, the latest rage among the the hippies, are all in the head.

Dr. Junji Kumamoto, of the university's agriculture department, says the only substance in the peels even slightly narcotic is a trace of acetaldehyde, sometimes used in paint. And it evaporates when the peel is baked. Thus, he contends, any narcotic effect is probably imagined.

1967 average strength, 404,000.

If U.S. casualties continued at the same rate in relation to troop strength for the remainder of 1967, they would total for the year about 15.2 per cent of average strength.

Last year's 35,000 casualties represented about 12.7 per cent of the average U.S. troop strength during 1966.

Earlier this year, Ambassador to Vietnam Henry Cabot Lodge predicted that "the percentage of American casualties will start declining."

The current deadly tempo of fighting was illustrated Thursday as the military command in Saigon announced the United States suffered a record 274 men killed in fighting last week. This compares with the Korean war's weekly average of 255 over 37 months.

At the current rate of losses, the United States could sustain 61,000 casualties this year, approaching Korea's first and most bloody 12 months of battle.

Projecting the first quarter's weekly averages of killed and wounded through 1967 escalates U.S. losses to 8,320 killed and 52,780 wounded for the year. Korea's first year claimed 74,700 casualties -- 21,000 killed and 53,700 wounded.

If this projection held true, the American commitment of life and limb in southeast Asia since 1961 would surge by the end of this year to 104,482 casualties — 14,964 dead, 89,518 wounded.

In the entire Korean campaign, 33,629 American servicement were killed in action. Another 103,284 were wounded. World War II killed 291,557 U. S. fighting men and wounded 470,846.

As of last Saturday, the count of American dead in the Vietnam war totaled 8,560, with 49,922 wounded.

Many of the wounded suffered relatively minor injuries.

A Pentagon analysis between January 1965 and October 1966 showed that of 29,622 men who were wounded, 13,411 or just over 45 per cent returned to duty without requiring hospitalization.

Of the remaining 16,211, nearly three-fourths, 11,723, returned to duty, most in Vietnam, after recuperating a short time; 848 left service due to disability; 409 died; and the remaining 3,595 remained in the hospital, with doctors estimating that half would return to duty.

Curtis May Oppose Long

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, R-Mo., told a town meeting of his constitutents Thursday night he is considering opposing U.S. Sen. Edward V. Long, a Democrat, in the 1968 election.

Curtis said he has not sought the office of senator in the past because he wanted to be a student of government. He said the House of Representatives permitted this but the work load in the Senate would be too much to allow him to continue his studies.

"This time I won't close the door," Curtis said, "It's not just a rumor that I'm thinking of running for the Senate.

The Webster Groves congressman made the disclosure to about 150 persons attending his first town meeting of the year. The Curtis town meetings were designed to improve communication between his constitutents and himself.

Curtis said Missouri does not have a strong two-party system and "I'm dedicated to building such a system."

Two Springfield Banks Resume Saturday Hours

SPRINGFIELD AP -- Two of Springfield's six banks announced today they would go back to Saturday hours after 20 years of no business on the last day of the week.

American National and Empire State said they would stay open from 9 a.m. to noon during the summer months. Officials said the decision to open on Saturdays were based on expressions of the need for banking service by merchants and other customers.

The city's four other banks have not announced their plans.

TV Cameras Make Pounds Stand out

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Almost all television viewers are weight-watchers. Not their own, but performers' weights.

The camera is a cruel eye that not only picks up wrinkles and sagging necklines on aging women performers, but somehow adds about 15 pounds on the worst spots of every performer. With few exceptions, everybody in television is either on a diet or going on one the next day.

The fans notice. They eagerly tune in the first Jackie Gleason Show of the season to find if Gleason lost any pounds over the summer. They learned to tell the age of a "Perry Mason" episode by the steadily expanding girth of the star, Raymond Burr, over the seasons.

Bob Hope has had his skinny seasons and his plumper ones.

The ups and downs of Jack E. Leonard are easily noted on the assorted variety shows on which he appears.

But of all the stars, the one who had made the most dramatic reduction of all is Sid Caesar. In a recent appearance on the Dean Martin Show, his slim boyish build combined with a new hair-style actually made him hard to recognize.

Caesar has, in fact, lost 50 pounds over the past few months. He will be in CBS's "The Sid Caesar-Imogene Coca-Carl Reiner-Howard Morris" special next Wednesday night, a reunion of the team that made "Your Show of Shows" an early TV delight. They wanted to use the old title, but could not get permission from Max Liebman, producer of the old show, who owns it.

"I just decided one day that I had too much weight," said Caesar, "and I said that's it — I'll lose it. So I did."

"I just went on a high protein diet and I do a lot of exercises, like push ups," he continued. "That's all there is to it. The exercises are just as important as the diet."

Caesar, whose career has been concentrated recently more on night club appearances and film roles than on television, does not hanker particularly for a return to weekly television unless it could be a free wheeling variety hour.

Rust Buys Cape Paper

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Purchase of The Southeast Weekly Bulletin, a weekly newspaper with facilities at 421 Broadway, by Gary Rust from Mrs. Beulah Hart has been announced.

Rust will assume direction of the newspaper as its publisher April 1. Mrs. Hart, who has owned and operated the publication since the death of her husband, the late Wm. G. Hart, will serve as its editor.

Rust, associated with Rust and Martin in the firm's new home furnishings center on Kingshighway south and the store at 615 Broadway, said he will devote full time to the newspaper and to an advertising agency he is now in the process of organizing.

Mr. and Mrs. Hart acquired the newspaper in 1953, and its publication offices remained at the old location on South Spanish street until last summer when they moved to the present location.

Where There's Smoke, There's Risk Of Dying

(Second of four articles)

While the influence of cigarette smoking on lung cancer has made a tremendous impact on the public, it should not be forgotten that there is an even more extensive connection between smoking and heart disease.

One dramatic statistic underscores this point, the Missouri Heart Association notes. It is estimated that each year at least 60,00 American men die prematurely of coronary heart disease that has been accelerated by cigarette smoking. That is about equal to the number of deaths from a combination of lung cancer plus all other diseases which are statistically blamed on cigarettes.

The obvious point is that the middle - aged male -- and to a lesser extent, everyone else -- who smokes cigarettes ought to be worrying more about both his heart and his lungs.

Equally pointed are the latest statistics derived from a 4-year study of over one million ican Cancer Society:

For the first time, suggestive evidence linking cigarette smoking and strokes was shown. The stroke death rate was 40 per cent higher in men aged 55-64, who smoked cigarettes, as compared with nonsmokers. In this same disease category, the risk proved unexpectedly greatest for women. Female smokers in all age groups had up to twice the stroke death rate of nonsmoking women.

The same study also showed that women are not protected against the effects of tobacco. The overall death rate for women smokers aged 45-64 was considerably higher than for nonsmoking women.

Men smoking as few as 1-9 cigarettes a day had death rates substantially higher than those for men who had never smoked regularly.

Death rates were higher among those who started smoking young, highest among those who started before age 15.

The death rate of men who smoked cigarettes was more than twice that of men who had never smoked regularly. But -- and from this statistic every cigarette smoker can take heart -- men who had stopped smoking ten years before enrollment in the study had the same average death rate as men who had never smoked.

Two More NBC Newscasters Stay on Air

NEW YORK (AP) - Two more well - known National Broadcasting Co., newscasters, Ray Scherer and Morgan Beatty, have joined Chet Huntley and Frank McGee in going on the air despite a strike by the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists.

But in Washington, State Department sources said Secretary of State Dean Rusk will not appear on NBC's international "Meet the Press" program Sunday if the strike by the 18,000-member union is still on against the major TV and radio networks.

Negotiators for the networks and the union have been summoned to Washington Saturday for talks in the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service offices in efforts to settle the walkout, now in its third day. Talks broke off Tuesday night, and the union struck NBC, CBS, ABC and the Mutual Broadcasting System Wednesday morning.

The strike is over wages and commercial fees. It was called in behalf of about 100 local on the air newsmen at network-owned stations in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. Their salaries exceed $11,000 a year. Most network stars, some of whose salaries range upward to the $100,000 level, supported the strike as members of AFTRA even though network newscasters had reached an agreement last January.

Programming continued with minimum of disruption Thursday. Reruns of comedies replaced soap operas. Most of the game and panel shows are taped and were not affected. When their backlog runs out, repeat shows will be presented.

Live entertainment programs, such as the Ed Sullivan Show on Sunday night, will not be presented unless the strike is settled. Repeats have been scheduled.

How America's red-white-and-blue collar workers help keep America strong.

U.S. In May 1941, top representatives of America's labor unions met with Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, and pledged their support of the Payroll Savings Plan for U.S. Savings Bonds.

Today, organized labor still endorses and actively supports the program. And the Payroll Savings Plan, just an experiment in 1941, now proudly boasts 8 million members, mostly union people, sharing a personal interest in their future and their country's.

With the Payroll Savings Plan, saving for the future is downright easy — and painless. How can you spend money you don't even see? When you sign up, a small part of your money is tucked away every payday. Automatically. And starts earning you interest of 4.15% on every Bond you buy and hold to maturity. Bonds grow quickly. So when you need the money for important, personal things, the money is right there — ready to help pay for them.

Important things like a new home, education, that dream vacation — or your retirement.

Buy Bonds on the Payroll Savings Plan where you work and you'll find yourself in pretty good company. And dollars ahead.

A Londoner wound up a business trip to the Orient with a visit to Taipei. At a Chamber of Commerce luncheon he was asked to say a few words. Almost none of his audience could understand English, and he could not speak a word of Chinese. His address was, therefore, to be translated by an interpreter sentence by sentence.

"Well," he began, "I just want all you fellows to know that I'm tickled to death to be here."

A look of agony appeared on the interpreter's face. "This poor man," he said in halting Chinese, "scratches himself until he dies, only to be with you."

Kansas Pigs Lose Trip To Vietnam

DOWNS, Kan. (AP) — The priorities of war have rubbed out a trip to Vietnam for 108 hogs from north - central Kansas.

Instead, the animals will be sold at public auction Saturday and the proceeds will be sent to South Vietnam to buy pigs there and give them to needy farmers.

Reason for the change in plans is that the Pigs-for-Peace Committee has been notified that the Air Force can't furnish transportation for the hogs—that war demands have taken all priority on its planes.

The auction will be held at the farm of Dan Vander Giesen, committee chairman.

All of the animals have been vaccinated, blood-tested and cleared for international shipment. The 98 gilts will begin farrowing late in May.

Jim Finley, son of the former Downs minister who started the idea four months ago, said they represent approximately a $7,000 to $8,000 investment by the project.

"I would almost guess that more money will be raised by selling the pigs back," he said, "because the farmers probably will pay a pretty good price. Those pigs were picked as the best out of about 10 different herds of hogs and the owners had lowered the price for the project."

The bad thing about it, he said, "is that we won't have that personal, direct contact."

A four-man delegation was to have accompanied the animals to Vietnam and stayed there a month.

Funds were sent from all over north-central Kansas by individuals, churches, schools, civic clubs and other groups to pay for the hogs and for feed.

The animals were to have been received by Finley's father, the Rev. S. Ben Finley, who is working in Vietnam under the Agency for International Development. The minister wanted them to start a breeding station.

Under the plan, each Vietnamese farmer who receives pigs would pledge to return one from the first litter to extend the project.

Vander Giesen said the committee was disappointed but not discouraged by the change in plans because the new project will do much good, but with less meaning.

"We still have a great project, a great aim, and thousands of people know what we stand for and hope to accomplish," he said.

NEW DELHI, INDIA (AP) - If you have a world map that shows only seven continents, you may want to order a new edition.

An eminent Indian geologist, and some of his colleagues in other nations, believe Africa is slowly - but ever so slowly - breaking up into two continents.

However, if you own any real estate there, don't be alarmed. Prof. F. A. Ahmad estimates the split won't take place for at least several million years.

"The process is already going on, with valleys in the northeastern region getting wider," Ahmad said in an interview. "The next step will be for seas to be formed in them, like the Red Sea between Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

"Finally will come the actual division of the continent, with the eastern part moving toward the Indian Ocean and the western part going out into the Atlantic."

Actually, the division is unlikely to occur right down the middle of Africa. Instead, Ahmad visualizes the eastern portion being comprised of an area that includes Ethiopia, Kenya and Tanzania.

He said the formation of two Africas would represent a further advancement of a geological theory which maintains there used to be a supercontinent known as Gondwanaland, consisting of Africa, India, Australia, Antarctica and South America.

Ahmad, a professor at Aligarh Muslim University 100 miles southeast of New Delhi, presented a paper on this theory to a recent international symposium on the Indian Ocean.

About 170 million years ago, he believes, a major rupture occurred in Gondwanaland when a huge chunk of land broke away from the east coast of Africa.

During the next 130 million years that piece of real estate was subdivided two more times, this theory maintains. First Australia and Antarctica separated from what is now India. Then Antarctica parted from Australia.

Sometime during this period South America is believed to have broken away from western Africa. Even today their matching coastal lines indicate the two continents were once united.

What makes continents go their own ways? A common explanation, Ahmad said, is that the earth itself has expansionistic tendencies that cause ruptures in land masses and a swelling of currents in the sea.

"Obviously, a force capable of moving the continents must have existed inside the earth and there appears to be NO reason to believe that such a force, if it existed in the past, has ceased to exist now," Ahmad said in his paper.

However, there is NO cause for undue concern. Geologists don't anticipate any major changes in the foreseeable future. And by the time Africa has its rupture, engineers probably will have mastered the art of building bridges across oceans.

FT. ORD, CALIF. (AHTNC) - Army Private Calvin P. Broughton, 19, son of Mr. and Mrs. George C. Broughton Sr., 905 Main St., New Madrid, Mo., completed eight weeks of advanced infantry training March 21 at Ft. Ord, Calif.

He received specialized instruction in small unit tactics and in firing such weapons as the M-14 rifle, the M-60 machine gun and the 3.5-inch rocket launcher.

FT. BENNING, GA. (AHTNC) -- Glenn N. Lewis, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harry L. Lewis, 424 Washington, East Prairie, Mo., was commissioned an Army second lieutenant after graduating from the Infantry Officer Candidate School, Ft. Benning, Ga., March 27.

He was training in leadership, tactics of small infantry units, and use of infantry weapons. He also received instruction in map and aerial photograph reading, guerrilla warfare, and counterinsurgency operations.

A member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, he attended Southeast Missouri State College, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

His wife, Mary, lives at 803 S. Berry Road, St. Louis.

(D0755) USS ALFRED A. CUNNINGHAM (DD-752) (FHTNC) -- Sonar Technician William L. Voss, USN, son of Mrs. Hobert Voss of 811 E S Main St., Dexter, Mo., participated in a ship-to-shore gunfire battle off the coast of North Vietnam, as a crewmember of the U. S. Seventh Fleet destroyer Alfred A. Cunningham.

The Cunningham was in company with the radar picket destroyer Duncan when she was fired on, operating to stem the flow of arms and supplies into South Vietnam aboard enemy craft. The two destroyers quickly put down the enemy fire from shore batteries, and reported no casualties or damage.

Home based in Long Beach, Calif., the Cunningham has just completed her fourth month of an extended Western Pacific deployment.

CHARLESTON, S.C. -- A U.S. Air Force airframe repairman from Benton, Mo., is a member of an airlift wing cited for setting an unofficial world's record for low-altitude airdrops by C-141 Lockheed Starlifter aircraft.

Airman Third Class Danny K. Bollinger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bollinger Jr. of Benton, supported the 437th Military Airlift Wing at Charleston AFB, S.C., in its recent test airdrop of 34 tons of cargo.

The payload, a string of 28 loaded pallets connected by cables, was paradropped from a 500-foot altitude at 160 miles per hour. The cargo hit a 120-foot square bullseye on the Starlifter's initial flight over the target zone.

Wing members conducted the test--part of a demonstration for a Military Airlift Command (MAC) headquarters inspection team -- to prove the vast potential of the huge new C-141. The test, combined with other capabilities demonstrated by the airman's unit, brought the wing a successful rating from MAC headquarters observers.

Airman Bollinger's wing was the first unit on the East Coast to fly the C-141 on operational missions.

He attended Kelly High School.

BLYTHEVILLE AIR FORCE BASE, Ark. -- Best in Strategic Air Command honors were won recently by the 97th Airborne Missile Maintenance Squadron of Blytheville Air Force Base, Ark., for the second consecutive year.

Captain Robert M. Saxton, commander, 97th AMMS, received a message recently notifying him and the squadron of the selection made by Headquarters SAC.

In winning the award for the second time the local commander believes the 97th AMMS the first to win the award two consecutive years.

"I am almost certain that ours is the only squadron in SAC to win this particular award two straight years," said Captain Saxton.

The squadron was judged on its overall performance of its mission including job performance, appearance of the facility, effective supervision and management.

According to Captain Saxton, the biggest factor in winning the award was the quality of work performed by the airmen.

"The airmen in the squadron do anything they are called upon to do, with determination and a positive attitude. We are under-manned now and for them (the airmen) to perform this well, truly separates them from the ordinary."

Captain Saxton also complimented the squadron's supervisors for their contributions in winning the award.

"The noncommissioned officers' area of responsibilities, management and supervision, provided the 'tie-breaker.'

The two-hour inspection by higher headquarters proved that the squadron's supervisors did their jobs most effectively during the year."

No official date has yet been established for the trophy presentation. It is expected to be made in the near future.

One Third of Navy men Involved in Vietnam are Support Personnel Pearl Harbor -- In less than three years, the number of U. S. military personnel in the Republic of Vietnam has increased from 10,000 to more than 400,000. This buildup places heavy logistics demands on the Navy.

According to the Commander in Chief, Pacific Fleet, more than 15,000 of the 25,000 Navy men who serve ashore in Vietnam are support personnel. This is nearly one-third of the 55,000 personnel who are directly involved in the Vietnam war on any given day.

The 15,000 Navy support personnel ashore are members of the Service Force, Pacific Fleet, the Navy's logistical command in the Pacific. They provide a wide variety of services along the coast of Vietnam, from the Demilitarized Zone in the north to An Thoi in the Gulf of Siam in the south.

Naval Support Activity Da Nang has 7700 personnel, whose job it is to conduct logistic operations at ports and beaches in support of all free world forces in the I Corps tactical zone. In addition to the main base at Da Nang there are smaller naval support facilities at Chu Lai, Hue and Dong Ha. Dong Ha is only 4 1/2 miles from the DMZ.

Twelve hundred men are attached to the Naval Support Activity, Saigon. Unlike the activity at Da Nang, the Saigon activity supports only the Navy; the Army's Ist Logistical Command supplies all other forces in the area. Naval Support Activity, Saigon, has 10 base detachments at vital coastal points and up inland waterways. These detachments provide supplies, repairs and other services to Game Warden (river assault) and Market Time (coastal surveillance) forces.

Southwest Missouri Farmer's Irrigation Ingenuity Pays off

CARTHAGE, Mo.(AP)—Since Joseph's time, the Nile River has flooded each year to provide water and rich silt for the production of Egypt's food. In southwest Missouri, Eugene M. Poirot uses the Biblical technique to grow bumper crops on land that a generation ago brought a scant living to farmers.

The 68-year-old Poirot's Nile is Coon Creek, a sluggish little stream meandering through the rolling farm country. But in winter and early spring it can turn into a swollen, gushing torrent. This is when Poirot captures part of the excess water in ponds to use later when rains fail and the broiling sun threatens to shrivel the crops.

"This land has come through the whole sequence of poverty, farming, drought, depression, everything," Poirot said. "We're doing a good job of farming now by returning the plant food to the soil and supplying water."

In 1966, southwest Missouri was a drought-disaster area. Only 23 inches of rain fell, compared to the normal of 48. By pumping excess creek water into an 11-acre pond, Poirot irrigated 270 acres. His corn yielded 125 bushels an acre, and a field of green beans netted him $85 an acre.

"That isn't disaster," Poirot grinned.

Most irrigation in the United States involves drawing of water from deep wells or directly from amply supplied streams at an initial cost of from $20,000 to $30,000. Neither system is feasible in southwest Missouri. Poirot believes he has developed a cheap, simple method of turning poor land and deficient rainfall into riches for his community. It could be the key to industrial development as well.

About a year ago Poirot and area business leaders formed Ozark Agricultural and Industrial Development Corporation. Assisted by Midwest Research Institute of Kansas City, the group prepared a report showing some of the potentials for irrigation, production and development of industry. The proposed development area includes 2.1 million acres and extends into portions of Kansas and Oklahoma. The group is seeking a federal technical assistance grant of $50,000 to conduct a comprehensive survey which would be used to start specific development projects.

"If we can develop irrigation by using water usually wasted in runoffs," Poirot said, "we can have more additional income in a year than one of the dams would cost."

Poirot's total investment for irrigating up to 300 acres is $6,000.

"This has to be so cheap the guy without money can do it," Poirot said. "The rich guy doesn't need it."

Poirot's ponds are simply holes scooped out of the earth by bulldozers. The dams are earthen and lack the fancy and expensive concrete fixtures usually displayed. Water is pumped from Coon Creek at the rate of 2,500 gallons a minute by an old mine pump which cost $270. It is powered by a battered tractor operating a belt-driven pulley. The water is forced uphill through a large steel pipe into the pond.

When Poirot is ready to irrigate he opens a large valve and the water rushes through a system of cheap plastic pipes into the fields.

Robert Dale, publisher of the Carthage Press, is president of the development group and is a dedicated Poirot fan.

"We've been getting good support from our congressmen —both in Missouri and Kansas —and so far we haven't run into any snags," Dale said.

Area industry, Dale and Poirot claim, will develop as irrigation produces specialized crops such as beans, strawberries and other high-value commodities.

"When we open up production we can supply raw materials for processing plants of all kinds," Poirot said. "We ship our stuff out now to other areas. Why not do it all here at home?"

Poirot, a graduate of the University of Illinois, has been farming the "hard pan" of southwest Missouri since the 1920s. His parents came from Alsace - Lorraine in 1954, and his gestures, passion and belief in agriculture speak of his heritage.

Poirot has turned land that sold for $10 an acre 45 years ago into property that today is almost priceless, but in any case he doesn't want to sell.

Farmers —particularly those with extremely low incomes — can be helped by low-cost irrigation. Poirot said they would be able to quit their jobs in town and return full-time to the business of farming. But, they will have to be educated about irrigation and how it can be done with a minimum of investment.

"It'll go slow at first," Poirot said, "but we can move ahead 20 years in the next five."

On Feb. 20 he told a national farm policy conference in Washington, D. C.:

"The problem (agriculture) is more than simple economics, because human bodies, not crops, are the final products of farming."

WHAT WOULD WE DO

If in the life we had not the one called Christ? To walk beside us, and take our hands when the road is rough and we stumble on the way?

If we could not feel the warmth of his love when looking off into the sun-filled day and know that as the earth comes to life again, the same we will do after we have passed from this life into the next. What would we do if we had not the hope of an eternal life -- if we knew we would not see the ones we love ever again when they are departed and we gaze at them for the last time before they are put away into the earth? If we could feel no compassion for those less fortunate than we, that are sick and maimed and in despair?

If we could not see the beauty in the bloom of a flower, the green of the earth, or the eyes of a child?

Why would we strive or work in this world if not to prepare a far better one to go to after we have past the veil of darkness to step thru the turmoil of one city to one of peace and love and joy ever after?

What would we do, if when our hearts are filled with doubts and fears and heavy with burdens, we could not go to our own private place and commune with our Father until the light touch of his hand will lighten the weight, put a song in our heart and a smile on our lips?

Leaving us with more faith than ever that the world and the things there of belong to Him, and Him alone. We have them for awhile to use.

Leaves us knowing that he will take care of us, if we will let him. He truly knows our needs, our hearts.

Leaves us knowing how truly unworthy we are. How we fail him from one day to the other and makes our hearts ache that we can't seem to do more. Leaves us not understanding why some say that God is dead.

Leaves us not believing that he who says it really believes it himself as long as he can take a deep breath and feel the very soul of our own being separated from the body which houses it.

Makes us want to tell the whole world what wonderful peace you can feel by knowing that as long as there is life on this earth, as long as the stars are in Heaven and there is time -- Our God is not Dead -- not now or ever!

IN MEDICAL-aidman training, one of our classes consisted of giving first aid to a fellow classmate on a live-fire infiltration course. When the time came for the medic in front of me to crawl down that long 50 -meter trail to give first aid to his "patient," he froze at the starting point. The patient gave out a ghastly cry of simulated pain and yelled, "Medic!"

Came the reply from the starting point: "I don't make house calls!"

History reveals that "Help Wanted" notices were among the very first advertisements ever to appear in newspapers. The first newspapers carried no advertising, and these notices from employers were the start of newspaper advertising as we know it today.

Wherever newspapers are printed, the Employment pages in the Want Ads are the most important job market, where employers and employees meet, to the mutual benefit of both.

Letters to the Editor

March 28, 1967

The Daily Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri

To the Editor:

If everyone would study the methods and tactics used by the Bolsheviks in conquering a country, they would soon learn what the war in Vietnam is all about and why Rhodesia is next in line.

The record of the U. S. Senate investigation regarding the Katyn Forest massacre is a good example of the Bolshevik tactics of insuring leadership. It will be recalled that right after WWII the Bolsheviks killed practically all the Christian Polish Army Officers and threw them in a huge pile in the Katyn Forest. Public pressure forced a group of U. S. Senators to visit the scene. In using this method of elimination there was no possibility of those brave Polish Officers ever becoming leaders and overthrowing the Bolshevik's strangehold on the Polish people.

The "socalled" Vietnam war is a similar measure, as it destroys the healthy Christian boys by casualties and disease thus leaving the weaklings and imbeciles at home to breed.

The next phony war will be in Rhodesia where Christians will kill Christians while the Bolsheviks sit back and laugh as they direct the war operations from the "U.N. Security Council." Will the people ever wake up?

Cordially yours,
Robert C. Schwab

OF NOBLE ORIGIN

A youngster came home from school and told his mother the teacher had asked him where he had been born. "You know the answer to that," his mother replied easily, "I was in St. Mary's hospital."

"I know," confessed the youngster. "But I didn't want to sound like a sissy, so I said I was born in Yankee Stadium."

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

Dr. Kazutaka Watanabe is a third generation Christian in Japan. His grandfather, a Samawai warrior was so moved when he heard Christian pipe-organ music that he became a convert. Dr. Watanabe's father was a Baptist minister for 54 years.

Educated at the Japan University, at Colgate, Oxford and the University of Berlin, Dr. Watanabe has taught college all his life. He is also cultural advisor to Headquarters U.S. Forces and to the Fifth Air Force in Japan.

Besides being a Christian, Dr. Watanabe understands and accepts the faith of his ancestors, Buddhism. To us of the western world this may be hard to understand. But to the Japanese and Dr. Watanabe it is a natural approach. "I have two souls and I have no conflict," he says. His articles and talks show sympathy and understanding for both great faiths. He points out: "there are 50,970,000 Buddhist in Japan and 641,000 Christians," yet "in 1961, 2,750,000 copies of the Bible were sold in Japan. Since the end of the war about 30,000,000 copies have been sold and a great number of free copies have been distributed."

New Industry and Expansion in Sikeston

Schevelle Home Manufacturing Corporation, a new Sikeston industry, is one of 134 new manufacturing plants locating in Missouri during 1966. The company manufactures mobile homes.

Other new manufacturing enterprises coming to Southeast Missouri during the year were Caruthersville Shipyard Inc., Caruthersville; American Greeting Card Company, Cape Girardeau; Shirrell Ready Mix Company, Inc., Advance; Inland Shoe Manufacturing Company, Parma; Dow Chemical Company, Cape Girardeau; and Silsco, Inc., Poplar Bluff.

Sikeston also figured in industrial expansion with the enlargement of the Canvas Products Company. Other manufacturers in Southeast Missouri which broadened their base of operations were H.W. Gossard Company, Poplar Bluff; and International Hat Company, Dexter.

According to the Missouri Division of Commerce and Industrial Development in Jefferson City, Missouri acquired 134 new manufacturing plants during the year while 168 manufacturers announced expansion of their operations in the state.

The number of new plants moving into Missouri plus the number of present plant expansions resulted in a record-breaking high of more than 25,500 new jobs being created. This figure exceeded by more than 5,000 the new jobs announced during 1965.

It is expected that these new jobs will add in excess of $144 million to the state's annual manufacturing payroll. While many small communities acquired new companies last year the report shows that approximately four times more new jobs were announced in the four metropolitan areas of St. Louis, Kansas City, Springfield and St. Joseph than in outstate Missouri.

Investments in new and expanding industries last year soared to $138 million in construction of 8.2 million square feet of new manufacturing space. Statistics show that two-thirds of the new and expanding construction took place in the four metropolitan areas.

The 134 new manufactures provided 10,583 new jobs and the 168 expansions announced, opened jobs for 15,014 additional people. Investments in new plants amounted to $63,970,376 and expansions of present facilities accounted for an expenditure of almost $75 million.

There were many multi-million dollar developments in the industrial field announced in Missouri during 1966. Noteworthy among the list was the announcement that Zenith Radio Corporation would construct a plant in Springfield for the manufacture of both black and white and color television sets. The installation will cost more than $10 million and contain more than 650,000 square feet of floor space. When in full production the plant will employ approximately 4,000 persons.

The 3-M Company, with one plant under construction at Springfield, has plans for an additional one at Nevada. The combined installations will mean an investment of more than $17 million.

On the other side of the state Donaldson Company, Inc., announced plans to build a new plant at Kirksville. The new facility will cost about $1,250,000 and contain 125,000 square feet of floor space.

Expansion of present industry in Missouri during 1966 included an announcement by Von Hoffman Press, Inc., to increase production in Jefferson City by 50 per cent. This will entail the expenditure of about $3 million for a new plant to contain 250,000 square feet. In Kansas City the Sealright Company, Inc., announced a new plant would be built to cost one-million dollars. In St. Louis the Monsanto Chemical Company announced major expansions. At the Queeny plant, in that city, the company expanded production of maleic anhydride by 25-million pounds annually. It was already the world's largest producer of the chemical. At the St. Charles county plant the company announced increased silicon materials production by 50 percent in March and a second 50 percent was announced in November.

Throughout 1966 several Missouri manufacturers announced large increases in employment. Among the largest increases were the McDonnell Company and Ford Motor Company in St. Louis and the Remington Arms Company in Independence. These three companies alone accounted for more than 10,000 new jobs being created in Missouri last year by the expansion of their production facilities.

Rabbit Bids To Rescind Convention

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Rep. Richard J. Rabbit, D-St. Louis, said Wednesday he will introduce a resolution calling on the Missouri General Assembly to rescind its 1965 action asking Congress to call a constitutional convention to consider apportionment of state legislatures.

Rabbit, the majority floor leader in the House, said he would offer the resolution next Wednesday when the House reconvenes after an Easter recess.

An Illinois legislator, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Troy, announced Tuesday in Springfield that he had written letters to legislative leaders in 32 states asking that they rescind resolutions calling on Congress for the constitutional convention. Rabbit said he had been considering the resolution before hearing of Simon's announcement.

"I had come to the conclusion that the resolution asking Congress to call a convention to consider amending the Constitution to permit bicameral state legislatures to apportion one house on a basis other than population could open the door wide to constitutional revision," Rabbit said.

Rabbit said he felt such a convention might result in the federal Constitution being completely sabotaged. "I believe it would be dangerous at this time and we might find some of our basic freedoms scrapped," he said.

If two more states adopt the resolution it would be sufficient for Congress to call a convention which could result in overturning the U. S. Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote ruling.

School Values Related

"Aiding students in finding a value system is an imperative of the schools today," Dr. Herbert W. Schooling, dean of faculties of the University of Missouri in Columbia, told educators Thursday night at the high school cafetorium.

The occasion was the spring meeting of the Southeast Missouri Association of School administrators and the Southeast Missouri School Boards association. About 400 attended.

"The Establishment of a Value System as an Imperative to Education" was Dr. Schooling's topic.

If a school board were to formalize a systematic set of values, who would they consult, he asked. Would they ask the Pope? Would they ask community leaders? Would they ask the leaders of the Methodist church?

And if the school boards did find which values are desirable to teach would it be constitutional to teach them?

"These are questions that come to mind when we think of establishing a value system to teach," he said, but it should be pointed out that the school cannot help but influence the values of its students.

The teaching procedures, the actions of the school board, the social functions and regulations of a school say something about what it values, he said.

If a school board builds an athletic auditorium at the expense of needed improvements to the library system, that says something about what it values.

If the school is unwilling to support a kindergarten program, but spends money to stress sports, that says something about values, he continued.

"The schools can't escape the responsibility to inculcate a system of values," Dr. Schooling emphasized.

Quoting a news clipping, Schooling made the point, that if the educated man in the school systems is not willing to express standards, then what is the purpose of education.

The school must encourage students to develop a "human philosophy," he said. There must be planned opportunities for him to develop his philosophy.

The great need for students today, he cited, is guidance.

Schools have the obligation to develop values: to recognize honesty, beauty, integrity as lasting values.

The values are learned by experience, he continued. The schools must provide the right

Drought Area Shifts to Midwest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While the six-year long drought conditions in the Northeast have eased considerably, a lack of rainfall is posing a serious threat to farmers in the Midwest.

"Nothing particular to worry about now," says the Boston Weather Bureau.

"I'd go as far as saying the emergency here is gone," says New York City Water Commissioner James Marcus.

The talk is different in the Midwest.

"If it rains on a lawn in Kansas City, wheat drops a nickel," says a farmer. "We've had only a quarter of an inch since last September."

New Yorkers are looking forward to the possible lifting of some drought emergency measures still in effect like not being served a glass of water in the city's restaurants unless you request it.

Farmers in the Midwest are hopefully looking forward to bigger things, like early April rains to improve drought-stunted crops and erase the threat of dust storms and prairie fires.

The Northeast was helped by heavy winter snowfalls, which may have resulted from a shift in the normal pattern of weather coming from Canada and across the United States. The shift in the weather pattern likewise may have been the cause of the Plains states' lack of precipitation.

Meteorologists say cold Canadian air bypassed the Plains states and the Northwest, and instead ran east across the Great Lakes.

New York City reservoirs gained 4.8 billion gallons of water from melting snow and the city's water supply rose to a fraction below the normal level.

But south central Kansas has had less than three inches of precipitation since last fall when farmers seeded crops. The normal for the period is six inches.

San Angelo, in West Texas, had a 116-day dry spell until it received .04 of an inch of rain. Rivers and creeks in that section are almost dry.

Other sections of Kansas and Texas, and parts of Oklahoma, Colorado, Nebraska and Iowa are also in critical drought stages.

Unless substantial rains fall in the next two or three weeks there will be heavy losses in wheat and other grain crops, skimpy grass for livestock and more insect infections, agricultural experts report.

In New York, Marcus says that while the emergency is gone he is not sure the drought is over.

"We'll be in good shape in June," he says, "but it could be rough again in the fall."

That's why drought emergency measures, which also require a special ordinance to sprinkle a lawn and include a ban on home swimming pools, are still in effect. Marcus says no decision will be made on easing or lifting them until next month when the situation will be clearer.

Pennsylvania has lifted emergency conservation measures in the Delaware River basin.

The Philadelphia Weather Bureau says some dry areas remain in southeastern Pennsylvania, but that general conditions are improved and rivers and streams are above normal levels due to melting snow.

A storm now in Arizona is expected to ease the drought conditions in that state with more rain and snow at higher elevations forecast for tonight. Phoenix has received .68 inches of moisture since the first of the year. The normal for the period is 2.20.

Most of the 700 million inhabitants of Communist China reside in one-sixth of the country's 3.7 million square miles. They are crowded in the fertile plains and deltas of the east.

The driver received internal injuries. A passenger, Ruth Harper, 25, Union was scratched and bruised.

Both were taken to a Poplar Bluff hospital.

In a two-car collision Thursday at 6 p.m. on highway 80, one mile east of East Prairie, Woodrow Tinnon, 54, driving a 1967 Oldsmobile started to make a left turn, when a 1964 Buick, driven by James Emas, 23, Cape Girardeau, was attempting to pass the Oldsmobile.

Neither driver was injured, but Tinnon was arrested for driving while intoxicated, according to the highway patrol.

Larger Course Favored

Country Club directors at an informational meeting attended by 40 members Thursday night received approval of plans to enlarge the club's nine-hole golf course to 18 holes.

Members voted to increase the dues from $144 per year to $180 per year. An increase of $3 per month in the fees will become effective January 1.

The club has 270 members.

The increase in dues will take effect if the plans for expansion of the golf course are carried out, William Sikes, board member said.

Club board members approached the city council March 6 with a request to lease property near the airport for expansion of the course.

Before any work can be done to expand it, Federal Aviation Authority approval is needed, a lease price must be agreed upon, and a layout of the tract of land wanted must be presented to the council.

Three representatives of the club reported at the March 6 meeting that The Sikeston Industrial Development Corporation and the FAA had approved the plan to lease 45 acres for the expansion.

It was decided at that meeting to confer with Fred Schultz, president of Canvas Product Co. to see if the enlargement of the golf course would interfere with the expansion plans of the company.

Cotton Acreage To Dip Again

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farmers have indicated they plan to plant fewer acres to cotton this year than last year, when the acreage dipped to the lowest level since 1871.

An Agriculture Department report made available today shows that farmers have signed agreements with the government to keep out of production 4,712,000 acres of their 1967 crop allotment of 15,776,800 acres.

The department is offering payments and price supports to those who divert at least 35 per cent of their farm allotment. The purpose is to hold down production until heavy surpluses can be disposed of.

The report thus indicates that this year's plantings will be about 10,064,000 acres compared with 10,353,000 planted under a similar program last year.

Pioneer to Join in Toast of Land Bank System

William A. Dickison of St. Louis, who participated in the growth of the Federal Land Bank of St. Louis during most of the 50-year history of the national system, will speak at a banquet at the Holiday Inn Monday at 7:30 p.m.

Dickison, a former president of the St. Louis bank, started his long career with the institution in 1924. He retired in 1964 after 40 years service and is now chairman of the board of the Missouri State Bank of St. Louis.

In the banquet, the Federal Land Bank Association of Sikeston is joining the nationwide celebration of the anniversary of the bank system.

Hal F. Robertson, association manager, said the occasion will pay tribute to "American Farmers: Providers of Plenty."

Howard Schneider, East Prairie, president of the association, and Robertson will make welcoming remarks.

A 50th anniversary cake will be cut and a bank film will be shown.

The banquet will be attended by officers and directors of the association, business and agricultural leaders.

The date of the banquet coincides with the chartering of the last of the 12 Federal land banks in the system. All of the banks were chartered between March 1 and April 3, 1917, under the provisions of the Federal Farm Loan act. The Federal Land Bank of St. Louis was chartered March 8, 1917.

The Association is a part of the sixth farm credit district. The district includes Illinois, Missouri and Arkansas and has 64 associations, providing long-term, low cost loans to farmers.

"Through its anniversary celebration, the federal land bank system hopes to acquaint every American with the efficiency of agriculture and the technological developments which have taken place, enabling the American farmer to produce food and fiber unequaled in any other part of the world," Robertson said.

He pointed out that the federal land bank of St. Louis has made loans of more than $1 billion to more than 168,000 farmers during the past half century.

Money used through the federal land bank system is not government money, Robertson said. It is secured through the sale of bonds to the investing public. All government capital originally put into the system has been paid back to the federal Treasury.

Tom Gilmore Will Pilot Young Democrats

Tom Gilmore, assistant prosecuting attorney, was elected president of Scott County Young Democrats last night at the Rustic Rock Inn. He succeeds Bill Lewis.

Other officers chosen were Bill Burch, first vice-president; Bill Ferrell, second vice-president; Jim Green, secretary, and Pete Malone, treasurer. Chosen as state convention delegates were Lewis and Dan Norton.

George Burrus, Jefferson City, administrative assistant to the state director of revenue, eulogized the late President Franklin D. Roosevelt who once said:

"America will have to be led in the days to come by the youth. You will find that your fight against selfishness and injustice, against oppression, and above all, against war, will take you into a man-sized struggle."

"To prepare youth for this struggle," said Burrus, "the Democratic party was the first major political party to give official recognition to the place of youth in the affairs of the party."

Scott county officials present were State Rep. Tony Heckemeyer, Fielding Potashnick, prosecuting attorney; Aubrey Michael, collector; Jack Sides, probate judge; Gene Nunnelee, coroner; K. M. Streeter, committeeman, Sylvania township. Others present were Bill Burlison, Cape Girardeau county prosecutor and executive vice-president of the State Young Democratic club, and Frank Ferrell, Sikeston.

A resolution presented by Potashnick thanking Lewis for "fine work" was adopted.

Speaker Burrus said: "Since 1932 the role of young people in the party has constantly expanded. Today the leadership of our party is adding a new chapter to the history of the party, founded by Jefferson, strengthened by Jackson, challenged by Wilson, magnified by Roosevelt, saved by Truman, and inspired by Kennedy,

"There are many tasks we can perform to help our party. Among them are interest young men and women in problems of government, local, state and national; encourage young voters to take an active interest; provide a forum to discuss important economic and social issues; give young persons opportunity to become acquainted with candidates; participate in party affairs, as well as give leadership in political activities.

"Our own Governor Hearnes has expressed his interest in young people in Democratic affairs, he has encouraged its gorwth, and realized its importance to the parent party. To ignore politics you do so at a great risk as it will not ignore you. It will determine the taxes you will pay, the type home in which you live, the extent of your freedom, as well as many personal questions.

"Your influence on your community, state and nation, can be broadened through participation in young Democratic activities.

Chaffee Mayor Race Mounts In Confusion

CHAFFEE - Mayor H. G. Maxwell has requested that his name be taken off the ballot for the Chaffee city election Tuesday.

His opponent, R. H. Capshaw, who has filed for office, does not have his name on the ballot. Ballots were printed Thursday.

The law reads that a candidate's name cannot be stricken after the closing of the filing date, which was March 24.

Capshaw will run as a write-in candidate.

In a special election Tuesday voters approved annexation of the Capshaw property to the city of Chaffee so Capshaw could meet the residence requirement.

Farming engages 7 million workers. This exceeds the combined employment in transportation, public utilities, steel and auto inustries.

Bill to Transfer Parks Ironed out

WASHINGTON (AP) - The language of a proposed amendment to a Missouri bill designed to transfer some state parks to the National Park Service was worked out there Thursday by Missouri officials.

The bill pending in the Missouri General Assembly, would authorize the Missouri State Park Board to transfer Big Spring, Alley Spring and Round Springs state parks, near Eminence, Mo., to the federal government for inclusion in the Ozark National Scenic Driveways Area.

Court Blocks Rail Strike

CHICAGO (AP) - A federal court issued today a temporary order restraining conductors and brakemen from going out on a nationwide railroad strike.

Judge Richard B. Austin of the U.S. District Court issued the order at the request of the railroads.

The Order of Railroad Conductors and Brakemen had called a walkout for 12:01 a.m. Saturday.

Farm Product Prices Take Another Drop

WASHINGTON (AP) - Farm product prices declined 1 per cent during the month ended March 15, continuing a downturn which started last September and which has stirred up widespread farmer unrest.

The mid-March farm price level was about 8.5 per cent below last summer's peak and 7 per cent below those for March last year.

They were about 21 per cent below the record high reached in February 1951.

In reporting the new decline the Agriculture Department said lower prices for hogs and milk contributed most to the loss.

Price increases for wheat and eggs partially offset the decrease.

The report of the lower milk price came at a time when the National Farmers Organization was conducting a 25-state milk withholding action in an effort to get processors to increase prices the equivalent of two cents a quart.

Prices paid by farmers increased one-third of 1 per cent during the month ended March 15 to climb back to the record high first set in January this year. Prices paid by farmers were 3 per cent above those of a year ago.

The department said that milk prices declined 2 per cent between mid-February and mid-March.

Denton Shot to Death

EAST PRAIRIE - L. I. Denton, 77, a retired grocer and large property owner, was shot and killed at 6:55 a.m. today at his home, Coroner Elgin McMikle said.

Being held in the county jail at Charleston for investigation is Louis King, 55, Denton's brother-in-law.

Denton was shot five times with a .22 caliber rifle as he walked to his gagare to get his car, McMikle said. The top screen from a storm door in King's house, behind the Denton house, had been removed, McMikle said.

Denton walked about 20 steps after the shooting began before he collapsed and died.

Mississippi county sheriff's officers, who investigated, reported that the two men and Mrs. Denton had quarreled often in recent years.

A coroner's inquest will be held at 11 a.m. Saturday. The body was taken to the Shelby Funeral Home.

War Deaths Rise Sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new savagery of the Vietnam war has propelled U.S. combat deaths to levels 66 per cent above last year's average weekly losses. Communist fatalities are reported up 80 per cent.

A study of Pentagon figures shows American deaths so far this year are averaging 160 a week, compared with 96 in 1966. Enemy dead the first 12 weeks of 1967 has averaged about 1,800, compared with about 1,000 last year.

Communist forces are suffering even greater casualties in proportion to their strength.

The military estimates the Communists have sustained 33,000 wounded in addition to 22,000 dead thus far this year.

Military spokesmen admit the count of enemy dead is far from precise, and at best a haphazard and sometimes extrapolated estimate of bodies found on the battlefield. The wounded count is pure guesswork. Nevertheless, officials believe the rough tally is useful in assessing the impact of the war on the enemy's force levels.

The toll of 55,000 amounts to nearly 20 per cent of the enemy's 1967 average strength of 281,000.

By contrast the over-all U.S. casualties the first quarter of this year — 14,100 including 1,916 killed and 12,184 wounded — represent 3.5 per cent of the

School Values Related

"Aiding students in finding a value system is an imperative of the schools today," Dr. Herbert W. Schooling, dean of faculties of the University of Missouri in Columbia, told educators Thursday night at the high school cafetorium.

The occasion was the spring meeting of the Southeast Missouri Association of School administrators and the Southeast Missouri School Boards association. About 400 attended.

"The Establishment of a Value System as an Imperative to Education" was Dr. Schooling's topic.

If a school board were to formalize a systematic set of values, who would they consult, he asked. Would they ask the Pope? Would they ask community leaders? Would they ask the leaders of the Methodist church?

And if the school boards did find which values are desirable to teach would it be constitutional to teach them?

"These are questions that come to mind when we think of establishing a value system to teach," he said, but it should be pointed out that the school cannot help but influence the values of its students.

The teaching procedures, the actions of the school board, the social functions and regulations of a school say something about what it values, he said.

If a school board builds an athletic auditorium at the expense of needed improvements to the library system, that says something about what it values.

If the school is unwilling to support a kindergarten program, but spends money to stress sports, that says something about values, he continued.

"The schools can't escape the responsibility to inculcate a system of values," Dr. Schooling emphasized.

Quoting a news clipping, Schooling made the point, that if the educated man in the school systems is not willing to express standards, then what is the purpose of education.

The school must encourage students to develop a "human philosophy," he said. There must be planned opportunities for him to develop his philosophy.

The great need for students today, he cited, is guidance.

Schools have the obligation to develop values: to recognize honesty, beauty, integrity as lasting values.

The values are learned by experience, he continued. The schools must provide the right

Drought Area Shifts to Midwest

By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

While the six-year long drought conditions in the Northeast have eased considerably, a lack of rainfall is posing a serious threat to farmers in the Midwest.

"Nothing particular to worry about now," says the Boston Weather Bureau.

"I'd go as far as saying the emergency here is gone," says New York City Water Commissioner James Marcus.

The talk is different in the Midwest.

"If it rains on a lawn in Kansas City, wheat drops a nickel," says a farmer. "We've had only a quarter of an inch since last September."

New Yorkers are looking forward to the possible lifting of some drought emergency measures still in effect like not being served a glass of water in the city's restaurants unless you request it.

Farmers in the Midwest are hopefully looking forward to bigger things, like early April rains to improve drought-stunted crops and erase the threat of dust storms and prairie fires.

The Northeast was helped by heavy winter snowfalls, which may have resulted from a shift in the normal pattern of weather coming from Canada and across the United States. The shift in the weather pattern likewise may have been the cause of the Plains states' lack of precipitation.

Meteorologists say cold Canadian air bypassed the Plains states and the Northwest, and instead ran east across the Great Lakes.

New York City reservoirs gained 4.8 billion gallons of water from melting snow and the city's water supply rose to a fraction below the normal level.

But south central Kansas has had less than three inches of precipitation since last fall when farmers seeded crops. The normal for the period is six inches.

San Angelo, in West Texas, had a 116-day dry spell until it received .04 of an inch of rain. Rivers and creeks in that section are almost dry.

Other sections of Kansas and Texas, and parts of Oklahoma, Colorado, Nebraska and Iowa are also in critical drought stages.

Unless substantial rains fall in the next two or three weeks there will be heavy losses in wheat and other grain crops, skimpy grass for livestock and more insect infections, agricultural experts report.

In New York, Marcus says that while the emergency is gone he is not sure the drought is over.

"We'll be in good shape in June," he says, "but it could be rough again in the fall."

That's why drought emergency measures, which also require a special ordinance to sprinkle a lawn and include a ban on home swimming pools, are still in effect. Marcus says no decision will be made on easing or lifting them until next month when the situation will be clearer.

Pennsylvania has lifted emergency conservation measures in the Delaware River basin.

The Philadelphia Weather Bureau says some dry areas remain in southeastern Pennsylvania, but that general conditions are improved and rivers and streams are above normal levels due to melting snow.

A storm now in Arizona is expected to ease the drought conditions in that state with more rain and snow at higher elevations forecast for tonight. Phoenix has received .68 inches of moisture since the first of the year. The normal for the period is 2.20.

Most of the 700 million inhabitants of Communist China reside in one-sixth of the country's 3.7 million square miles. They are crowded in the fertile plains and deltas of the east.

War Deaths Rise Sharply

WASHINGTON (AP) — The new savagery of the Vietnam war has propelled U.S. combat deaths to levels 66 per cent above last year's average weekly losses. Communist fatalities are reported up 80 per cent.

A study of Pentagon figures shows American deaths so far this year are averaging 160 a week, compared with 96 in 1966. Enemy dead the first 12 weeks of 1967 has averaged about 1,800, compared with about 1,000 last year.

Communist forces are suffering even greater casualties in proportion to their strength.

The military estimates the Communists have sustained 33,000 wounded in addition to 22,000 dead thus far this year.

Military spokesmen admit the count of enemy dead is far from precise, and at best a haphazard and sometimes extrapolated estimate of bodies found on the battlefield. The wounded count is pure guesswork. Nevertheless, officials believe the rough tally is useful in assessing the impact of the war on the enemy's force levels.

The toll of 55,000 amounts to nearly 20 per cent of the enemy's 1967 average strength of 281,000.

By contrast the over-all U.S. casualties the first quarter of this year — 14,100 including 1,916 killed and 12,184 wounded — represent 3.5 per cent of the

Two Arrested For Service Station Theft

Scott County authorities arrested a man identified as John Hubbard, Niles, Mich., today at Sands, an unincorporated Negro community north of Sikeston near Blodgett, and charged him with petit larceny.

Hubbard and a Negro juvenile were charged in connection with the theft of $30 to $40 from Ross' Independent Service, 701 West Malone, Tuesday afternoon.

Sikeston police arrested five 13-year-old boys Thursday on suspicion of burglary, stealing, vandalism and shoplifting. The youths were transferred to the authority of Robert Summers, juvenile officer for Scott and Mississippi counties.

Another juvenile was arrested by police Thursday and referred to the juvenile officer for shooting a BB gun in the city limits.

William Freeman Holmes, 215 North Frisco, was charged by police Thursday with drunkeness and disturbing the peace and destruction of private property. He was arrested on West Malone, police reported.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

There are times when it appears that youth has lost its zip - the spirit of adventure, the desire to compete, the will to endure and succeed - giving up these qualities in a quest for security, serenity and certainty.

But all is not lost. Consider these two items reported this week in the news:

In Chaffee Richard Steimle looked down the street. It was nearly midnight. He called the attention of his wife to a tiny figure near the downtown region.

Investigating they came upon a 17-month-old girl clad in pajamas, clutching a rag doll. The tot ran into Mrs. Steimle's arms, crying "Mommie".

No one in the block knew the child. The little girl was put to bed and police notified.

Nine hours elapsed.

Then Mr. and Mrs. Mark Hopkins of Centerville, Iowa, visiting in a home three and a half blocks away became aware that their daughter, Amy, was missing when another daughter, Sarah, awakened.

Hopkins believes that Amy left the house to search for him. He had left the house after he thought the family was asleep to talk to a relative next door.

Amy never had opened a door by herself before but she apparently succeeded in doing it this time.

Through police the family was reunited.

Then there was the story of another young Iowan.

Light pounding on the front door awakened Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Severin in Charles City, Iowa, at 6 a.m. Severin went to the door groggily, not fully awake.

He awakened fully when he opened it. There stood four-year-old son, Richie, fully clothed. The boy had been last seen by his parents when he was tucked in bed.

The explanation?

The boy said that he had gone rabbit hunting. On his return he discovered that he had locked himself out.

Oh yes, his hunt was unsuccessful.

No spirit of adventure in youth! Our boys and girls have plenty of it.

If George Washington paid for all the beds in which he slept it is doubtful if the nation's first president would have gone down in history as a wealthy man.

American cities have dug down deeply to pay for entertaining Presidents since Washington's day. Modern day chief executives have crossed the Potomac many times to visit every section of the nation.

Stone markers abound throughout the United States relating when Presidents visited just about every square inch of geography in the country. Cities visited have picked up the tab.

There is no marker in Lewiston, Maine. There is some doubt whether any President will visit that rock ribbed city ever again.

When President Lyndon B. Johnson called in Lewiston in September citizens there sent him a $784.77 bill to pay the cost of extra lighting the occasion required.

Perhaps the good but close fisted folks in Lewiston thought that Johnson could pay the bill with funds saved by turning off the lights in the White House.

If the White House digs down and pays the bill the door is wide open for other bills. This stampede for federal aid could produce more ulcers than foreign aid or the poverty war.

If Maine Democrats shell out what will happen to the national administration claim that Johnson came to Lewiston to make a non political talk?

Perhaps the Lewiston city finance board can be silenced by pork barrel funds for a pet community project without being compensated directly for the extra electricity used to shed light - political or otherwise - on the President's visit.

If the White House can't solve this problem surely the great, powerful and resourceful federal bureaucracy can handle it.

If there isn't any federal agency or agencies authorized to handle this community problem surely the bureaucrats can figure out something. They have never been known to be puzzled long about how to spend the American taxpayers' hard earned cash.

FLORIDA'S BATMEN

Voters in Florida elect a new state legislature on Tuesday (March 28.)

If it were not deadly serious, what is happening these days in Florida would be like something out of Batman. Gov. Claude R. Kirk, Jr., is enlisting a private army to fight a public war against crime.

There are those in the Miami area who would agree that the threat of crime is as extraordinary as Gov. Kirk's approach. The Florida Sheriff's Bureau on March 17 estimated that at least 100 Mafia big wheels are living in south Florida.

The election of a new legislature on Tuesday will provide a test of sorts for Gov. Kirk's appointment of the head of a private detective agency as his "general" in a statewide war against crime. The election was ordered by a three-judge federal panel which ruled on Feb. 9 on a new reapportionment plan for the lawmaking body.

Almost immediately after Kirk took office he hired the Wackenhut Corporation, the third largest private police force in the country, to follow up a campaign promise to rid Florida of racketeers. The firm is headed by George Russell Wackenhut, a 47-year-old former Federal Bureau of Investigation agent.

Gov. Kirk's hard-nosed, right-wing close personal friend, Wackenhut is reported to have made himself several times a millionaire out of the detective and private guard agency. He is nominally a $1-a-year man on the crime hunt for Gov. Kirk, but his company draws as much as $1,000 a day.

A feature of the Kirk policy distressing to some Floridians is that it is financed privately. Jack Nelson asserts in the Los Angeles Times: "Kirk's office reported that even before he was sworn in he was assured of adequate financing by business and industrial leaders, and that before he began actively soliciting, money was pouring into the war chest."

Naming no names, Sen. Edward V. Long (D-Mo.) declared on Feb. 27 that the United States is being threatened by the same practices that turned Germany into a Nazi dictatorship. He pointed out that private detective firms were being hired by political leaders to take the place of legitimate law enforcement agencies. And he warned: "The issue is that the American citizens' right to be left alone, the right of privacy, the right to be free from the fear that you are being wiretapped, bugged, or snooped in."

The private police concept is by no means limited to Florida. For one thing, Kirk says, "Conferences have been held with FBI officials, the Treasury Department, and Internal Revenue agents for the purpose of receiving their cooperation. All have shown a desire to join in a mutual effort to rid Florida of one of its greatest problems - organized crime."

Gov. Lester Maddox of Georgia on Feb. 27 also proposed using private funds to enable private investigators to fight crime, saying that sometimes "certain restrictions" keep law enforcement officers from being effective. Florida's Kirk consulted with Gov. Ronald Reagan of California on Jan. 13.

Reagan declined to be questioned about the meeting, but said that he had no plans for a private police force. However, a Reagan-backed bill in the California legislature would establish a public corporation against crime which would be financed by public and private funds. There's more than a fair chance that the Batmen will multiply.

HOW TO ENJOY YOUR WORK

Adapt yourself to your work. Perhaps you need to change your method, not your work.

Plan your work; work your plan. Lack of system produces that "I'm swamped" feeling.

Dont' attempt everything at once. Spread out your work. Follow Paul's example: "This one thing I do."

Get a correct mental attitude. Think your work pleasant and easy, and it will tend to be that way.

Become proficient. Study ways to improve. It's always easier to do a thing right.

COPPER SHORTAGE

Last summer, you may recall, there was a big to-do in Washington over the dwindling supply of copper in the nation's reserve stockpile of strategic materials. The department of Commerce directed private U.S. manufacturers to cut down on the use of copper in other products because it was needed for military orders. Now it turns out that, at the very same time, the Commerce Depargment issued licenses for export of more than $5 million worth of copper scrap to Communist Yugoslavia.

We remember the hue and cry that was raised - after December 7, 1941 - because some American merchants had sold scrap iron to Japan. But at least those deals were made before the war started. There's no such excuse in the case of last year's copper sale to Tito.

Also, we note that many other strategic materials beside copper are being sold to Communist regimes, with approval of our own government leaders, even though they are quite clearly things which help those Communist forces which our fighting men are facing in combat in Vietnam. These materials include various chemicals and chemical processing plants, industrial instruments, technical data and even electronic and navigational equipment for installation on Soviet-built aircraft. All this even before the Congress has acted on proposed legislation to increase trade with Communist regimes.

We fully agree with the Congressman, a member of the House Appropriations Subcommittee for Defense, who says it makes no sense to sell or trade such materials to other Communist regimes.

We fully agree with the Congressman, a member of the House Appropriations Subsell or trade such materials to other Communist regimes which are "assisting aggressors to kill and maim our soldiers in Vietnam." This is more than just foolish - it's downright treacherous.

A shortage of reserve stocks in materials for our own military needs is bad enough in itself. But even more frightening is the realization that official Washington would dare to ship strategic metals to the enemy through the side door while pressing American manufacturers to cut back on the use of such materials.

SUMMIT CONFERENCES

President Johnson's recent trip to the Far East is the latest sympton of a long-standing delusion which has bemused American foreign policy and public opinion. Few seem immune to it, from Presidents of the United States to "the man on the street," and those who are not deluded often feel they must go along with the myth for the sake of popularity. The myth is that summit conferences work, or have any meaningful place in dealings among nation.

Summit conferences are a reporter's dream. They splash headlines all around the world. Everyone seems to like to see the photographs of heads of state hobnobbing with one another, and everyone seems willing to read the meaningless statements of perfect accord that follow each meeting. Many get from this a comforting feeling that somehow international peace has been brought nearer by such gatherings.

But the actual accomplishments of summit conferences have been almost zero. At best, they have merely recorded common purposes already well known and understood by the governments of two friendly nations, while at the same time giving malcontents an opportunity to vent their spite against the leaders involved, as happened to President Johnson in Australia. At worst, as at Teheran and Yalta, these conferences have resulted in secret deals advantageous to freedom's foes.

As the leading nation in the world, surely it is time that the United States matured enough to dispense with these childish shows and get on with the hard task of saving freedom. Every summit conference throws a smoke-screen over the real issues, to no good purpose. HLH

NEW YORK (AP) — Many housewives yearn to be glamorous stars. Caterfina Valente is a glamorous star who aspires to be a housewife.

"If I ever should retire, I'll concentrate on being a housewife," she said. "I am very good at it."

She is so good at it that she has written a cookbook in German. It features Chinese dishes, her specialty.

It took seven generations of entertainers to produce Caterina, a performer of stunning brilliance whose versatility and industry lead her to be spoken of in show business with something akin to awe.

The slender, vivacious singer can belt out songs in 12 languages. She dances and plays the flute and guitar. She gives from 50 to 70 concerts a year in places as far apart as Sweden and Argentina. She makes a dozen to 20 television appearances a year in this country, Britain, Germany and Italy, and turns out from four to eight record albums.

She also tapes — in a West Berlin station, in Japanese —a disc jockey program for a Tokyo station and writes a syndicated fashion tips column.

"In my spare time I am also taking a correspondence course in photography," she said the other evening, resting in her room after receiving an ovation for her opening show in the Americana Hotel's Royal Box.

Caterina absorbed her many languages as a child while traveling with her Italian mother, Maria Valente, one of Europe's top comediennes.

"I had to learn several languages just to be able to talk to the playmates I met in the countries we traveled through," she said.

Caterina is married to Eric Van Aro, a German television producer whom she met and fell in love with when he was a music hall juggler. They live in an apartment in Lugano, Switzerland, but the singer feels she is lucky if she gets to spend three months of the year there.

Miss Valente offstage is warm, friendly and charming.

"Going up in this business is one thing, but staying there is much harder," she says. "It takes work, work, work."

To Caterina life means love and cheerfulness.

"With love you can make everything work," she said. "It is not difficult to love and give love. If you do that, you'll get love back yourself.

"I believe in smiling 100 per cent of the time if you can, too. You can reach so many things with a single smile —as long as you mean it."

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, the lady from Maine, was scrutinizing promotions in the air force reserve some time ago when she found a man, Col. Sam Goddard, being proposed for a promotion to Brigadier General although he had performed only one - sixth of the required time for such promotion.

There was no description of Sam Goddard appended to the proposed promotion. Sen. Smith asked the air force why he was being promoted if he hadn't put in the required period of service. The air force replied that Goddard couldn't take time away from "campaigning," so had asked for a waiver. Mrs. Smith asked why he was given a waiver, and the air force replied that he was Governor of Arizona.

When word got out that Sen. Smith opposed Goddard's promotion, there came a strong telegram from another Arizonan, named Goldwater, urging the Senate Armed Services Committee to confirm Goddard. Goldwater is a Republican, Goddard a Democrat; but reserve officers stick together regardless of politics.

Mrs. Smith, however, though also a Republican, remained unmoved by the telegram from her fellow Republican in Arizona.

"If Goldwater could put in his training time while campaigning for President in 50 states," she remarked, "I can't understand why Col. Goddard couldn't get in his training time while campaigning for governor in one state."

As a result, Goddard failed on his promotion. He is now up for consideration again.

PROPOSED PEACE MISSION

Some of LBJ's friends have suggested that he call in U.N. Secretary General Thant and Sen. Bobby Kennedy of New York, place air force one at their disposal and tell them to fly to Hanoi to talk peace with President Ho Chi Minh.

It would be interesting to see whether he would make any more concessions to Bobby than to Lyndon.

It's also suggested that the peace party might include Cardinal Spellman of New York, who helped get the United States bogged down in Vietnam in the first place; also ex-Vice President Nixon, the most eager-beaver war hawk of the Eisenhower administration.

NEWSPAPER STRIKES

Long overdue is a congressional investigation of the effect of labor unions on the decreasing number of newspapers in the USA.

There have now been either newspaper strikes or drastic union demands in New York in 1962, 1963, 1965 and 1966, with another strike now looming.

One prolonged newspaper strike caused the death of a great newspaper, the New York Herald - Tribune, which had molded American political opinion for almost a century.

At one time the AFL-CIO considered starting a national newspaper in order to present labor news fairly. It also advanced over $100,000 to the old Los Angeles news to keep it from folding. But simultaneously union demands have increased publishing costs to the point that newspaper after newspaper has had to fold or combine with its competitor. Obviously newspaper monopoly defeats labor's goal of news competition.

At one time Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N. Y., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, started a probe of newspaper monpoly but, like so many of Manny's other probes, it mysteriously faced away. No one ever knew what happened, and his law firm isn't telling.

PAN AMERICAN PUPPET

The state department is secretly pushing another bland and innocuous diplomat to become Secretary General of the Organization of American States when the term of Dr. Jose Mora expires.

Mora, one of the most ineffectual bureaucrats ever to hold down the all - important job of OAS Secretary General, will retire in 1968. There has been much discussion among Latin American diplomats of replacing him with a strong executive who would jump into difficult Latin American imbroglios and settle them before they become critical. This is what ex - President Carlos Davila of Chile did when he was head of the OAS; also Lleras Camargo, ex - President of Colombia.

Instead the state department wants to put up another ineffectual puppet whom it can control; namely, Gonzalo J. Facio, former Ambassador of Costa Rica.

TAX REBEL ASHBROOK

Rep. John A. Ashbrook, R-Ohio, continually rants about the importance of local and state governments, claims that they should be forthright and independent of the federal government. To this end local self - taxation is all - important -- in fact is the number one cornerstone of self-government.

Yet when Montgomery County, Maryland, adopted an income tax law, Rep. Ashbrook, who lives in the county, promptly returned the income tax form and made it clear he had no intention of paying it. Ashbrook went further and circulated a letter to all members of the House of Representatives, seeking to organize a concerted drive against paying the local income tax.

"Would you please let me know if you. . . would be interested in meeting at some later date to determine what should be done in face of this contention which is being made by Maryland officials," wrote Ashbrook.

Despite Ashbrook's drive, M. L. Jardeleza of the Montgomery county revenue office is standing pat.

"A resident," he says, "is defined as an individual . . . who maintains a place of abode within the county for a fixed statutory period."

Ashbrook has been living in Maryland for some time.

Inside Labor

Character in New Orleans Kennedy Drama Worked For Top Mafia Chief

Dallas: -- Despite the histrionics of king-sized Jim Garrison, the eerie trail of the Kafka-like David W. Ferrie does not appear to lead to the tragedy of '63.

In 40 still-classified pages of the Warren Commission Report, Ferrie's path, instead, heads towards one of the land's most notorious of Mafia dons.

The secret record, established by ace FBI teams, discloses that Ferrie positively was in New Orleans the day a rifle spat fire and death from the book depository.

Ferrie, a pilot, in effect worked for Carlos Marcello, often referred to as the syndicate "boss" of Louisiana and described by the late Sen. Estes Kefauver as "one of the worst criminals in the country."

The manicured, bantam multi-millionaire Marcello is one of the 13 alleged Mafia high council who were picked up by New York police last September in a Queens restaurant.

Amongst those with him at the interrupted dinner was his intimate friend Carlo Gambino, long accused of being the Cosa Nostra's account executive in charge of labor. The ailing don, Carlo Gambino, has powerful influence over far-flung waterfronts and some construction labor.

His comrade-in-arms, Marcello, who once took a swing at an FBI agent, for many years had had influence over trucking and waterfront activity as well as gambling throughout the Southwest.

During one Senate investigation a witness testified that "we find their fingers (the Marcello mob) in Texas. . . and in Mississippi, Alabama. . . and up into Missouri. . .in the St. Louis area."

For almost two decades Carlos Marcello, estimated by police to be worth at least $50 million in real estate, motels, oil wells, shrimp boating and commercial enterprises, has been feuding with the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The Federals charged he was an alien and sought to deport him. The Federals also charged him with attempting to show he was born in San Jose Pinula, Guatemala, by allegedly forging a birth certificate. Some seven years ago the U.S. government actually flew him to Guatemala. But he returned. Then he was charged with other improprieties involving his birth papers.

Marcello came to trial during the week of Nov. 18, 1963. His learned counsel then was G. Wray Gill, who also spoke for him when he attempted to hit an FBI agent at the New Orleans airport.

The defense needed an investigator and all - around handyman for some of this work. They took on a weird character by the name of Dave W. Ferrie. The latter hit the road considerably on this case of government charges that Marcello had used a false passport. Ferrie took at least one trip to Guatemala.

Mr. Gill outpointed the government and Marcello beat the rap -- on Nov. 22, 1963.

The late Ferrie later told the FBI that he was just outside the courtroom when the jury acquitted Marcello. But Gill told federal agents that at 12:15 p.m. that grim day he talked to his office. One of his staff told the lawyer that Ferrie was right there. This was just five minutes before the assassination of Jack Kennedy hundreds of miles away.

This testimony conflicts but it does establish the dead Ferrie's alibi. It also proves how tangled are the skeins of this explosive bit of history. So many people, so many weird ones, so many easy mysteries to whip up.

And despite the criss-crossing of so many lives and so many deaths and so many evil ones, the case of Dave W. Ferrie proves one thing big Jim Garrison did not think of proving -- that is, there is far more to do on other fronts than has been done by this District Attorney.

He was elected to fight crime and keep law and order and not to go chasing deviationist shadows across the estuary.

POOR CHARLIE SAYS!

There are times when it appears that youth has lost its zip - the spirit of adventure, the desire to compete, the will to endure and succeed - giving up these qualities in a quest for security, serenity and certainty.

But all is not lost. Consider these two items reported this week in the news:

In Chaffee Richard Steimle looked down the street. It was nearly midnight. He called the attention of his wife to a tiny figure near the downtown region.

Investigating they came upon a 17-month-old girl clad in pajamas, clutching a rag doll. The tot ran into Mrs. Steimle's arms, crying "Mommie".

No one in the block knew the child. The little girl was put to bed and police notified.

Nine hours elapsed.

Then Mr. and Mrs. Mark Hopkins of Centerville, Iowa, visiting in a home three and a half blocks away became aware that their daughter, Amy, was missing when another daughter, Sarah, awakened.

Hopkins believes that Amy left the house to search for him. He had left the house after he thought the family was asleep to talk to a relative next door.

Amy never had opened a door by herself before but she apparently succeeded in doing it this time.

Through police the family was reunited.

Then there was the story of another young Iowan.

Light pounding on the front door awakened Mr. and Mrs. Virgil Severin in Charles City, Iowa, at 6 a.m. Severin went to the door groggily, not fully awake.

He awakened fully when he opened it. There stood four-year-old son, Richie, fully clothed. The boy had been last seen by his parents when he was tucked in bed.

The explanation?

The boy said that he had gone rabbit hunting. On his return he discovered that he had locked himself out.

Oh yes, his hunt was unsuccessful.

No spirit of adventure in youth! Our boys and girls have plenty of it.

If George Washington paid for all the beds in which he slept it is doubtful if the nation's first president would have gone down in history as a wealthy man.

American cities have dug down deeply to pay for entertaining Presidents since Washington's day. Modern day chief executives have crossed the Potomac many times to visit every section of the nation.

Stone markers abound throughout the United States relating when Presidents visited just about every square inch of geography in the country. Cities visited have picked up the tab.

There is no marker in Lewiston, Maine. There is some doubt whether any President will visit that rock ribbed city ever again.

When President Lyndon B. Johnson called in Lewiston in September citizens there sent him a $784.77 bill to pay the cost of extra lighting the occasion required.

Perhaps the good but close fisted folks in Lewiston thought that Johnson could pay the bill with funds saved by turning off the lights in the White House.

If the White House digs down and pays the bill the door is wide open for other bills. This stampede for federal aid could produce more ulcers than foreign aid or the poverty war.

If Maine Democrats shell out what will happen to the national administration claim that Johnson came to Lewiston to make a non political talk?

Perhaps the Lewiston city finance board can be silenced by pork barrel funds for a pet community project without being compensated directly for the extra electricity used to shed light - political or otherwise - on the President's visit.

If the White House can't solve this problem surely the great, powerful and resourceful federal bureaucracy can handle it.

If there isn't any federal agency or agencies authorized to handle this community problem surely the bureaucrats can figure out something. They have never been known to be puzzled long about how to spend the American taxpayers' hard earned cash.

FLORIDA'S BATMEN

Voters in Florida elect a new state legislature on Tuesday (March 28.)

If it were not deadly serious, what is happening these days in Florida would be like something out of Batman. Gov. Claude R. Kirk, Jr., is enlisting a private army to fight a public war against crime.

There are those in the Miami area who would agree that the threat of crime is as extraordinary as Gov. Kirk's approach. The Florida Sheriff's Bureau on March 17 estimated that at least 100 Mafia big wheels are living in south Florida.

The election of a new legislature on Tuesday will provide a test of sorts for Gov. Kirk's appointment of the head of a private detective agency as his "general" in a statewide war against crime. The election was ordered by a three-judge federal panel which ruled on Feb. 9 on a new reapportionment plan for the lawmaking body.

Almost immediately after Kirk took office he hired the Wackenhut Corporation, the third largest private police force in the country, to follow up a campaign promise to rid Florida of racketeers. The firm is headed by George Russell Wackenhut, a 47-year-old former Federal Bureau of Investigation agent.

Gov. Kirk's hard-nosed, right-wing close personal friend, Wackenhut is reported to have made himself several times a millionaire out of the detective and private guard agency. He is nominally a $1-a-year man on the crime hunt for Gov. Kirk, but his company draws as much as $1,000 a day.

A feature of the Kirk policy distressing to some Floridians is that it is financed privately. Jack Nelson asserts in the Los Angeles Times: "Kirk's office reported that even before he was sworn in he was assured of adequate financing by business and industrial leaders, and that before he began actively soliciting, money was pouring into the war chest."

Naming no names, Sen. Edward V. Long (D-Mo.) declared on Feb. 27 that the United States is being threatened by the same practices that turned Germany into a Nazi dictatorship. He pointed out that private detective firms were being hired by political leaders to take the place of legitimate law enforcement agencies. And he warned: "The issue is that the American citizens' right to be left alone, the right of privacy, the right to be free from the fear that you are being wiretapped, bugged, or snooped in."

The private police concept is by no means limited to Florida. For one thing, Kirk says, "Conferences have been held with FBI officials, the Treasury Department, and Internal Revenue agents for the purpose of receiving their cooperation. All have shown a desire to join in a mutual effort to rid Florida of one of its greatest problems - organized crime."

Gov. Lester Maddox of Georgia on Feb. 27 also proposed using private funds to enable private investigators to fight crime, saying that sometimes "certain restrictions" keep law enforcement officers from being effective. Florida's Kirk consulted with Gov. Ronald Reagan of California on Jan. 13.

Reagan declined to be questioned about the meeting, but said that he had no plans for a private police force. However, a Reagan-backed bill in the California legislature would establish a public corporation against crime which would be financed by public and private funds. There's more than a fair chance that the Batmen will multiply.

HOW TO ENJOY YOUR WORK

Adapt yourself to your work. Perhaps you need to change your method, not your work.

Plan your work; work your plan. Lack of system produces that "I'm swamped" feeling.

Dont' attempt everything at once. Spread out your work. Follow Paul's example: "This one thing I do."

Get a correct mental attitude. Think your work pleasant and easy, and it will tend to be that way.

Become proficient. Study ways to improve. It's always easier to do a thing right.

COPPER SHORTAGE

Last summer, you may recall, there was a big to-do in Washington over the dwindling supply of copper in the nation's reserve stockpile of strategic materials. The department of Commerce directed private U.S. manufacturers to cut down on the use of copper in other products because it was needed for military orders. Now it turns out that, at the very same time, the Commerce Depargment issued licenses for export of more than $5 million worth of copper scrap to Communist Yugoslavia.

We remember the hue and cry that was raised - after December 7, 1941 - because some American merchants had sold scrap iron to Japan. But at least those deals were made before the war started. There's no such excuse in the case of last year's copper sale to Tito.

Also, we note that many other strategic materials beside copper are being sold to Communist regimes, with approval of our own government leaders, even though they are quite clearly things which help those Communist forces which our fighting men are facing in combat in Vietnam. These materials include various chemicals and chemical processing plants, industrial instruments, technical data and even electronic and navigational equipment for installation on Soviet-built aircraft. All this even before the Congress has acted on proposed legislation to increase trade with Communist regimes.

We fully agree with the Congressman, a member of the House Appropriations Subcommittee for Defense, who says it makes no sense to sell or trade such materials to other Communist regimes.

We fully agree with the Congressman, a member of the House Appropriations Subsell or trade such materials to other Communist regimes which are "assisting aggressors to kill and maim our soldiers in Vietnam." This is more than just foolish - it's downright treacherous.

A shortage of reserve stocks in materials for our own military needs is bad enough in itself. But even more frightening is the realization that official Washington would dare to ship strategic metals to the enemy through the side door while pressing American manufacturers to cut back on the use of such materials.

NEW YORK (AP) — Many housewives yearn to be glamorous stars. Caterfina Valente is a glamorous star who aspires to be a housewife.

"If I ever should retire, I'll concentrate on being a housewife," she said. "I am very good at it."

She is so good at it that she has written a cookbook in German. It features Chinese dishes, her specialty.

It took seven generations of entertainers to produce Caterina, a performer of stunning brilliance whose versatility and industry lead her to be spoken of in show business with something akin to awe.

The slender, vivacious singer can belt out songs in 12 languages. She dances and plays the flute and guitar. She gives from 50 to 70 concerts a year in places as far apart as Sweden and Argentina. She makes a dozen to 20 television appearances a year in this country, Britain, Germany and Italy, and turns out from four to eight record albums.

She also tapes — in a West Berlin station, in Japanese — a disc jockey program for a Tokyo station and writes a syndicated fashion tips column.

"In my spare time I am also taking a correspondence course in photography," she said the other evening, resting in her room after receiving an ovation for her opening show in the Americana Hotel's Royal Box.

Caterina absorbed her many languages as a child while traveling with her Italian mother, Maria Valente, one of Europe's top comediennes.

"I had to learn several languages just to be able to talk to the playmates I met in the countries we traveled through," she said.

Caterina is married to Eric Van Aro, a German television producer whom she met and fell in love with when he was a music hall juggler. They live in an apartment in Lugano, Switzerland, but the singer feels she is lucky if she gets to spend three months of the year there.

Miss Valente offstage is warm, friendly and charming.

"Going up in this business is one thing, but staying there is much harder," she says. "It takes work, work, work."

To Caterina life means love and cheerfulness.

"With love you can make everything work," she said. "It is not difficult to love and give love. If you do that, you'll get love back yourself.

"I believe in smiling 100 per cent of the time if you can, too. You can reach so many things with a single smile — as long as you mean it."

Washington Merry - Go - Round

By Drew Pearson

WASHINGTON -- Sen. Margaret Chase Smith, the lady from Maine, was scrutinizing promotions in the air force reserve some time ago when she found a man, Col. Sam Goddard, being proposed for a promotion to Brigadier General although he had performed only one - sixth of the required time for such promotion.

There was no description of Sam Goddard appended to the proposed promotion. Sen. Smith asked the air force why he was being promoted if he hadn't put in the required period of service. The air force replied that Goddard couldn't take time away from "campaigning," so had asked for a waiver. Mrs. Smith asked why he was given a waiver, and the air force replied that he was Governor of Arizona.

When word got out that Sen. Smith opposed Goddard's promotion, there came a strong telegram from another Arizonan, named Goldwater, urging the Senate Armed Services Committee to confirm Goddard. Goldwater is a Republican, Goddard a Democrat; but reserve officers stick together regardless of politics.

Mrs. Smith, however, though also a Republican, remained unmoved by the telegram from her fellow Republican in Arizona.

"If Goldwater could put in his training time while campaigning for President in 50 states," she remarked, "I can't understand why Col. Goddard couldn't get in his training time while campaigning for governor in one state."

As a result, Goddard failed on his promotion. He is now up for consideration again.

PROPOSED PEACE MISSION

Some of LBJ's friends have suggested that he call in U.N. Secretary General Thant and Sen. Bobby Kennedy of New York, place air force one at their disposal and tell them to fly to Hanoi to talk peace with President Ho Chi Minh.

It would be interesting to see whether he would make any more concessions to Bobby than to Lyndon.

It's also suggested that the peace party might include Cardinal Spellman of New York, who helped get the United States bogged down in Vietnam in the first place; also ex-Vice President Nixon, the most eager-beaver war hawk of the Eisenhower administration.

NEWSPAPER STRIKES

Long overdue is a congressional investigation of the effect of labor unions on the decreasing number of newspapers in the USA.

There have now been either newspaper strikes or drastic union demands in New York in 1962, 1963, 1965 and 1966, with another strike now looming.

One prolonged newspaper strike caused the death of a great newspaper, the New York Herald - Tribune, which had molded American political opinion for almost a century.

At one time the AFL-CIO considered starting a national newspaper in order to present labor news fairly. It also advanced over $100,000 to the old Los Angeles news to keep it from folding. But simultaneously union demands have increased publishing costs to the point that newspaper after newspaper has had to fold or combine with its competitor. Obviously newspaper monopoly defeats labor's goal of news competition.

At one time Rep. Emanuel Celler, D-N. Y., chairman of the House Judiciary Committee, started a probe of newspaper monpoly but, like so many of Manny's other probes, it mysteriously faced away. No one ever knew what happened, and his law firm isn't telling.

PAN AMERICAN PUPPET

The state department is secretly pushing another bland and innocuous diplomat to become Secretary General of the Organization of American States when the term of Dr. Jose Mora expires.

Mora, one of the most ineffectual bureaucrats ever to hold down the all - important job of OAS Secretary General, will retire in 1968. There has been much discussion among Latin American diplomats of replacing him with a strong executive who would jump into difficult Latin American imbroglios and settle them before they become critical. This is what ex - President Carlos Davila of Chile did when he was head of the OAS; also Lleras Camargo, ex - President of Colombia.

Instead the state department wants to put up another ineffectual puppet whom it can control; namely, Gonzalo J. Facio, former Ambassador of Costa Rica.

TAX REBEL ASHBROOK

Rep. John A. Ashbrook, R-Ohio, continually rants about the importance of local and state governments, claims that they should be forthright and independent of the federal government. To this end local self - taxation is all - important -- in fact is the number one cornerstone of self-government.

Yet when Montgomery County, Maryland, adopted an income tax law, Rep. Ashbrook, who lives in the county, promptly returned the income tax form and made it clear he had no intention of paying it. Ashbrook went further and circulated a letter to all members of the House of Representatives, seeking to organize a concerted drive against paying the local income tax.

"Would you please let me know if you. . . would be interested in meeting at some later date to determine what should be done in face of this contention which is being made by Maryland officials," wrote Ashbrook.

Despite Ashbrook's drive, M. L. Jardeleza of the Montgomery county revenue office is standing pat.

"A resident," he says, "is defined as an individual . . . who maintains a place of abode within the county for a fixed statutory period."

Ashbrook has been living in Maryland for some time.

Character in New Orleans Kennedy Drama Worked For Top Mafia Chief

Dallas: -- Despite the histrionics of king-sized Jim Garrison, the eerie trail of the Kafka-like David W. Ferrie does not appear to lead to the tragedy of '63.

In 40 still-classified pages of the Warren Commission Report, Ferrie's path, instead, heads towards one of the land's most notorious of Mafia dons.

The secret record, established by ace FBI teams, discloses that Ferrie positively was in New Orleans the day a rifle spat fire and death from the book depository.

Ferrie, a pilot, in effect worked for Carlos Marcello, often referred to as the syndicate "boss" of Louisiana and described by the late Sen. Estes Kefauver as "one of the worst criminals in the country."

The manicured, bantam multi-millionaire Marcello is one of the 13 alleged Mafia high council who were picked up by New York police last September in a Queens restaurant.

Amongst those with him at the interrupted dinner was his intimate friend Carlo Gambino, long accused of being the Cosa Nostra's account executive in charge of labor. The ailing don, Carlo Gambino, has powerful influence over far-flung waterfronts and some construction labor.

His comrade-in-arms, Marcello, who once took a swing at an FBI agent, for many years had had influence over trucking and waterfront activity as well as gambling throughout the Southwest.

During one Senate investigation a witness testified that "we find their fingers (the Marcello mob) in Texas. . . and in Mississippi, Alabama. . . and up into Missouri. . .in the St. Louis area."

For almost two decades Carlos Marcello, estimated by police to be worth at least $50 million in real estate, motels, oil wells, shrimp boating and commercial enterprises, has been feuding with the Immigration and Naturalization Service.

The Federals charged he was an alien and sought to deport him. The Federals also charged him with attempting to show he was born in San Jose Pinula, Guatemala, by allegedly forging a birth certificate. Some seven years ago the U.S. government actually flew him to Guatemala. But he returned. Then he was charged with other improprieties involving his birth papers.

Marcello came to trial during the week of Nov. 18, 1963. His learned counsel then was G. Wray Gill, who also spoke for him when he attempted to hit an FBI agent at the New Orleans airport.

The defense needed an investigator and all - around handyman for some of this work. They took on a weird character by the name of Dave W. Ferrie. The latter hit the road considerably on this case of government charges that Marcello had used a false passport. Ferrie took at least one trip to Guatemala.

Mr. Gill outpointed the government and Marcello beat the rap -- on Nov. 22, 1963.

The late Ferrie later told the FBI that he was just outside the courtroom when the jury acquitted Marcello. But Gill told federal agents that at 12:15 p.m. that grim day he talked to his office. One of his staff told the lawyer that Ferrie was right there. This was just five minutes before the assassination of Jack Kennedy hundreds of miles away.

This testimony conflicts but it does establish the dead Ferrie's alibi. It also proves how tangled are the skeins of this explosive bit of history. So many people, so many weird ones, so many easy mysteries to whip up.

And despite the criss-crossing of so many lives and so many deaths and so many evil ones, the case of Dave W. Ferrie proves one thing big Jim Garrison did not think of proving -- that is, there is far more to do on other fronts than has been done by this District Attorney.

He was elected to fight crime and keep law and order and not to go chasing deviationist shadows across the estuary.

H. L. Hunt Says

SUMMIT CONFERENCES

President Johnson's recent trip to the Far East is the latest sympton of a long-standing delusion which has bemused American foreign policy and public opinion. Few seem immune to it, from Presidents of the United States to "the man on the street," and those who are not deluded often feel they must go along with the myth for the sake of popularity. The myth is that summit conferences work, or have any meaningful place in dealings among nation.

Summit conferences are a reporter's dream. They splash headlines all around the world. Everyone seems to like to see the photographs of heads of state hobnobbing with one another, and everyone seems willing to read the meaningless statements of perfect accord that follow each meeting. Many get from this a comforting feeling that somehow international peace has been brought nearer by such gatherings.

But the actual accomplishments of summit conferences have been almost zero. At best, they have merely recorded common purposes already well known and understood by the governments of two friendly nations, while at the same time giving malcontents an opportunity to vent their spite against the leaders involved, as happened to President Johnson in Australia. At worst, as at Teheran and Yalta, these conferences have resulted in secret deals advantageous to freedom's foes.

As the leading nation in the world, surely it is time that the United States matured enough to dispense with these childish shows and get on with the hard task of saving freedom. Every summit conference throws a smoke-screen over the real issues, to no good purpose. HLH

Revival Services at First Baptist Continue

The Rev. Jack Hymer, pastor of the Attadle Baptist church in Western Australia, and Harold A. Souther, associational music-educational director of the Kansas City Baptist association, are conducting revival services through Sunday at the First Baptist church.

A reception, welcoming them to Sikeston, was given Monday night after the service. About 250 attended the reception in the church dining room. Lime punch and cookies were served by the hospitality committee. The serving table was centered with an Easter floral arrangement flanked by yellow candles. The Rev. Mr. Hymer showed colored slides of customs, flowers, ranches and churches in Australia.

Rockefeller, Percy Vows Saturday

CHICAGO (AP) — The wedding cake is almost ready, the fitter has taken her final tucks in the bridgemaids' dresses, and hotels have begun to overflow with celebrated guests for Sharon Percy's marriage Saturday to John D. (Jay) Rockefeller IV.

The mood is festive, for friends are as determined as the families of the attractive young couple — he is 29, she 21 — that the shadow of less than eight months will not mar this occasion.

"Many of us haven't been back here since the terrible time of Valerie's funeral," one close friend of the family said.

"Naturally, this is on our minds and it is on Sharon's too. As with all twins, she was very close to her sister," said the friend, as she spoke of the unsolved murder of Valerie Percy in the Percy's suburban home in Kenilworth last September 18.

"However, the whole family feels that this wedding is what Valerie would want for Sharon. They all feel very strongly that Valerie is with them now."

Although 800 invitations were mailed, Mary Jane Keiss, supervising the wedding details, has alerted caterers to prepare for 1,200 at the reception at Ida Noyes Hall. It follows the double-ring ceremony at Rockefeller Memorial Chapel on the University of Chicago campus.

On the campus where Sharon's father, Sen. Charles H. Percy, once worked his way through school, and in the Gothic chapel where Jay's grandfather, John D. Rockefeller Jr., built the carillon that will resound after the ceremony, the Rev. E. Spencer Parsons, chapel dean, went over details of the wedding.

"If 1,500 guests come I'm afraid 300 will have to sit where they can't see the ceremony," the minister said.

During the service, the Rev. Mr. Parsons will interchange passages of the Book of Common Prayer with the Rev. Robert J. McCracken, pastor of New York's Interdenominational Riverside Church. He performed the bridegroom's adult baptism. Sharon is a Christian Scientist, which has no wedding ceremony.

The Rev. Mr. McCracken arrived Thursday night, as did a host of Rockefellers, Percy relatives and friends.

The 13th floor of Ambassador East Hotel was sealed off by personnel employed by the Percy's to afford privacy to the 54 people in its 34 rooms.

On that floor, along with the bridal party, are Mr. and Mrs. Laurance Rockefeller; Mrs. John D. Rockefeller III, Jay's mother; much of the Guyer family, who are Mrs. Percy's relatives; and Prince Amyn A. Khan, the late Aly's brother, an usher. Sharon is on the private floor, too.

Security men permitted a dressmaker on Floor 13 to make alterations on the dresses purchased in New York two months ago and kept locked up until now.

The guest list is as secret as the designer of the bride's gown. However, the union of the daughter of Republican Percy and Jay, a Democrat among Republican Rockefellers, is attracting great figures in politics as well as business.

Former President Dwight D. Eisenhower reportedly sent his regrets, but Michigan Gov. George Romney is expected, along with New York Mayor John V. Lindsay; Sen. Mark Hatfield, R-Ore., and Sen. Howard Baker, R-Tenn., and their wives.

Lynda Bird Johnson is expected to arrive today, too. Her boyfriend actor George Hamilton may arrive Saturday.

The two young ladies became friends when both were guests at Laurance Rockefeller's ranch in Wyoming. Sharon later introduced Lynda and George.

The little 5-year-old's face saddened. "I think Mommie ate him."

CANALOU - The Women's Missionary Union of the Baptist church met Tuesday at the church with six members, Mrs. Leila Evans, Mrs. Gene Summers, Mrs. Edna Taul, Mrs. Alene Lasters, Mrs. Vera Kochel, Mrs. Lala McCann, and one visitor, Miss Debbie McCann, were present.

The meeting was opened with a devotional given by Mrs. Taul. Scriptures from the books of Job and Isaiah were read and discussed. Mrs. Kochel led the group in prayer. Mrs. McCann read the prayer calendar and led in prayer, calling each missionary whose birthday was March 28 by name.

During the business session Mrs. Kochel accepted the office of secretary-treasurer, formerly held by Mrs. Bettye McClarty. Mrs. McClarty's husband has accepted the pastorate of the Vanduser church.

The meeting was closed with prayer.

I was over 30 when I started college, and to my classmates, I was an old man. They were particularly concerned when they realized that I was older than many of our young instructors. One young friend said, "Doesn't it bother you being older than the professors?" "No, not really," I replied. "Whenever I get a low grade, I just go to see the prof and say, 'Look, son, what seems to be my trouble?' "

Food Prices Drop Again

NEW YORK AP - Food prices dropped again this week, with ham and eggs leading the list.

Pork supplies have been running nearly one-third larger than a year ago.

Supermarket pork prices are far lower than a year ago, and likely to remain so until summer.

Demand for eggs slowed after the Easter hodiday. Prices also are expected to stay low until summer.

There are about 5 per cent more hens in the country, and they are working harder. But they don't like hot weather, which is why egg prices will probably go up when summer arrives.

There also are larger supplies this spring of beef, turkeys and chickens.

Too, there also is slightly more milk, despite the spilt milk across the land.

Milk production started picking up in December, and March through July are the seasonally heavy production months.

Supplies of southern strawberries are increasing, and prices are dropping.

There are other signs of spring too, in the produce departments, with increasing supplies of asparagus, green onions, and in the Southwest, okra.

Cabbage, carrots, celery, lettuce, onions, potatoes and tomatoes are piling up, along with oranges, grapefruit, bananas, and on the West Coast, grapes and apples.

But canned corn and tomato prices have risen - short supplies.

A dear little old lady put down $1.50 at the Paramount theater window and demanded a loge seat for a showing of Dr. Zhivago.

"Sorry, ma'am," replied the cashier, "but that's not enough money. The lowest admission price for this particular movie is $3.50."

"So who is this Dr. Zhivago?" demanded the little old lady belligerently. "Some kind of specialist?"

Mrs. Kochel Is WMU Officer

CANALOU - The Women's Missionary Union of the Baptist church met Tuesday at the church with six members, Mrs. Leila Evans, Mrs. Gene Summers, Mrs. Edna Taul, Mrs. Alene Lasters, Mrs. Vera Kochel, Mrs. Lala McCann, and one visitor, Miss Debbie McCann, were present.

The meeting was opened with a devotional given by Mrs. Taul. Scriptures from the books of Job and Isaiah were read and discussed. Mrs. Kochel led the group in prayer. Mrs. McCann read the prayer calendar and led in prayer, calling each missionary whose birthday was March 28 by name.

During the business session Mrs. Kochel accepted the office of secretary-treasurer, formerly held by Mrs. Bettye McClarty. Mrs. McClarty's husband has accepted the pastorate of the Vanduser church.

The meeting was closed with prayer.

I was over 30 when I started college, and to my classmates, I was an old man. They were particularly concerned when they realized that I was older than many of our young instructors. One young friend said, "Doesn't it bother you being older than the professors?" "No, not really," I replied. "Whenever I get a low grade, I just go to see the prof and say, 'Look, son, what seems to be my trouble?'"

Food Prices Drop Again

NEW YORK AP - Food prices dropped again this week, with ham and eggs leading the list.

Pork supplies have been running nearly one-third larger than a year ago.

Supermarket pork prices are far lower than a year ago, and likely to remain so until summer.

Demand for eggs slowed after the Easter hodiday. Prices also are expected to stay low until summer.

There are about 5 per cent more hens in the country, and they are working harder. But they don't like hot weather, which is why egg prices will probably go up when summer arrives.

There also are larger supplies this spring of beef, turkeys and chickens.

Too, there also is slightly more milk, despite the spilt milk across the land.

Milk production started picking up in December, and March through July are the seasonally heavy production months.

Supplies of southern strawberries are increasing, and prices are dropping.

There are other signs of spring too, in the produce departments, with increasing supplies of asparagus, green onions, and in the Southwest, okra.

Cabbage, carrots, celery, lettuce, onions, potatoes and tomatoes are piling up, along with oranges, grapefruit, bananas, and on the West Coast, grapes and apples.

But canned corn and tomato prices have risen - short supplies.

A dear little old lady put down $1.50 at the Paramount theater window and demanded a loge seat for a showing of Dr. Zhivago.

"Sorry, ma'am," replied the cashier, "but that's not enough money. The lowest admission price for this particular movie is $3.50."

"So who is this Dr. Zhivago?" demanded the little old lady belligerently. "Some kind of specialist?"

Kenneth LaCroix.

Parma Invitational Down To Final Four Teams

PARMA -- Out of a field of 16 teams only four remain in the independent invitational basketball tournament and will battle for a berth in the finals tonight after taking victories last night.

Parma opened last night's action with a blistering 131-68 romp over Kennett followed by Gray Ridge's 127-94 win over Portageville. In the final game, The Daily Standard squad edged Sikeston's Rebels 85-64.

The high scoring Parma quintet without the services of two of its starters raced to a 28-12 first quarter lead and never let up, scoring 32-34 and 37 points in the final three periods for its victory.

Three host players scored more than 30 points. Leading the pack was All-America Lavern Garner with 44 points followed by David Sharp with 34 and Dwight Turner with 32.

Terry "Round" Turlington rolled in 28 points while teammate Frank Proctor added 14.

A well balanced scoring attack led the Gray Ridge squad into the semi-finals. Six men scored in double figures, five more than 20 points.

Leading the scoring for Gray Ridge was Larry King with 28 points followed by David Pyles, Jim Jones, Jerry Kelly and Bill Kelly with 21 each.

The victors raced to 28-26 first quarter lead but shot into a 61-41 halftime lead after holding down Portageville's offense the second period to 15 points while scoring 33.

Larry James took high game scoring honors with 37 points for Portageville. Teammates Van Amburg added 24 and Jim McMhon contributed 19.

It took an all-out team effort for the Daily Sikeston Standard basketball team to down the rugged and defensive minded Sikeston Rebels.

The Standard pulled to a 23-10 first period lead but fell back in the second period being outscored 30-18 and holding only a 41-30 lead.

Both squads played excellent defense as the Rebels held the Standard's squad to its lowest point production of the year, 85.

The Standard squad pulled to a 13-point lead after the third period opened but the Rebels fought back and dropped the lead to nine points twice in the same period.

Led by Jim Hart in the final period the Standard squad managed to pull out front by 20 points and insure the victory.

Hart ended the game with 21 points and high game honors while teammates Sam Tucker added 16 and Bob Miller contributed 12.

Charles Pardon topped the Rebels scoring with 15 points Ken Garner added 10.

Tonight's action will find the high scoring KWOC and Parma squads battling in the first game while defense is expected to tell the story in the second.

Hawks Drop Opener

SAN FRANCISCO AP - "We lost the game and it makes no difference whether we lost by 50 points or one," surmised player-coach Richie Guerin of the St. Louis Hawks who nearly won after benching himself.

If Guerin stays in Saturday night's game, the San Francisco Warriors had best beware, warned their own coach Bill Sharman.

San Francisco took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven playoff for the Western crown in the National Basketball Association chase by edging the Hawks 117-115 after building a 22-point lead on Thursday night.

Parma Invitational Down To Final Four Teams

PARMA -- Out of a field of 16 teams only four remain in the independent invitational basketball tournament and will battle for a berth in the finals tonight after taking victories last night.

Parma opened last night's action with a blistering 131-68 romp over Kennett followed by Gray Ridge's 127-94 win over Portageville. In the final game, The Daily Standard squad edged Sikeston's Rebels 85-64.

The high scoring Parma quintet without the services of two of its starters raced to a 28-12 first quarter lead and never let up, scoring 32-34 and 37 points in the final three periods for its victory.

Three host players scored more than 30 points. Leading the pack was All-America Lavern Garner with 44 points followed by David Sharp with 34 and Dwight Turner with 32.

Terry "Round" Turlington rolled in 28 points while teammate Frank Proctor added 14.

A well balanced scoring attack led the Gray Ridge squad into the semi-finals. Six men scored in double figures, five more than 20 points.

Leading the scoring for Gray Ridge was Larry King with 28 points followed by David Pyles, Jim Jones, Jerry Kelly and Bill Kelly with 21 each.

The victors raced to 28-26 first quarter lead but shot into a 61-41 halftime lead after holding down Portageville's offense the second period to 15 points while scoring 33.

Larry James took high game scoring honors with 37 points for Portageville. Teammates Van Amburg added 24 and Jim McMhon contributed 19.

It took an all-out team effort for the Daily Sikeston Standard basketball team to down the rugged and defensive minded Sikeston Rebels.

The Standard pulled to a 23-10 first period lead but fell back in the second period being outscored 30-18 and holding only a 41-30 lead.

Both squads played excellent defense as the Rebels held the Standard's squad to its lowest point production of the year, 85.

The Standard squad pulled to a 13-point lead after the third period opened but the Rebels fought back and dropped the lead to nine points twice in the same period.

Led by Jim Hart in the final period the Standard squad managed to pull out front by 20 points and insure the victory.

Hart ended the game with 21 points and high game honors while teammates Sam Tucker added 16 and Bob Miller contributed 12.

Charles Pardon topped the Rebels scoring with 15 points Ken Garner added 10.

Tonight's action will find the high scoring KWOC and Parma squads battling in the first game while defense is expected to tell the story in the second.

Mizzou Ties First of Double-Header, Loses Second

BIG EIGHT BASEBALL

By the Associated Press

A no-hit, no-run game was pitched by Bill Maddox of Kansas Thursday in a 3-0 baseball victory over Texas Lutheran at Seguin, Tex., in the Jayhawks' season opener.

Because it was a single game, Maddox worked a full nine innings. College doubleheaders are limited to seven innings each. The Jayhawks collected seven hits and profited by five Lutheran errors.

Missouri and Texas A &M, in a doubleheader at College Station, had to settle for a 6-6 tie after taking the first game through nine innings. Then Texas A&M won the second game 8-2, scoring five runs in the second inning.

Houston Baptist College had two eight-run innings in blanking Oklahoma State 18-0 in Houston. Seven of the 19 Baptists hits were for extra bases. Meanwhile OSU got only three hits off Ray Zaragoza.

Houston University downed Nebraska 6-3 with the help of three errors by Nebraska's third baseman, Bob Churchich.

Arizona State beat Oklahoma 9-2 at Tempe for the Sooners' sixth loss.

At Tucson, Ariz., Colorado defeated Iowa 3-0 behind the three-hit pitching of Taylor Tomey.

Hawks Drop Opener

SAN FRANCISCO AP - "We lost the game and it makes no difference whether we lost by 50 points or one," surmised player-coach Richie Guerin of the St. Louis Hawks who nearly won after benching himself.

If Guerin stays in Saturday night's game, the San Francisco Warriors had best beware, warned their own coach Bill Sharman.

San Francisco took a 1-0 lead in the best-of-seven playoff for the Western crown in the National Basketball Association chase by edging the Hawks 117-115 after building a 22-point lead on Thursday night.

When I Was A Boy

Since the publication of the late H. J. (Jack) Blanton's "When I Was A Boy" reminiscenes in book form in 1942, they have become increasingly popular. All the books have been sold, and are difficult to obtain. Because of the increasing demand for these articles, the Standard is reprinting them during the next few weeks in the belief that its readers, young and old, will enjoy reading about 70 to 100 years ago. Clip and save them.

THE FREE SILVER ER/

When I was a boy, one of the best-sellers in book departments was "Coin's Financial School." It purported to be questions by a seeker for truth about the free coinage of silver, and answers which showed what adoption of that policy would do for the common man.

Million of copies were sold. My father offered a copy, free of charge, to every person who paid his subscription to our paper for one year in advance. The demand was tremendous.

Only those who lived during the free coinage agitation have any idea what a hold it took upon the minds of people who were the victims of conditions, whatever they were, which contributed to hard times incident to the eighties and nineties. Readers of Coin's Financial School were convinced that most every economic and financial ill dated from the demonetization of silver.

William Jennings Bryan, who came to leadership of the silver forces by virtue of his controlling voice in the Democratic national Convention in Chicago, carried the war into gold standard citadels in the East and North, preaching the quantitative theory of money. By admitting silver to government mints and adding many millions of silver dollars and silver certificates as circulating mediums, he argued, money would become so plentiful that workers would get higher wages, farmers would get more for their products, and prosperity would spread to every nook and corner of the nation.

Wall Street and the bankers became whipping boys for Bryan and his followers. The fact that Britain had been on the gold standard through many decades was used as evidence that evils come of a conspiracy between British and American bankers which had culminated in the closing of our mints to silver.

Discovery of gold in Alaska in the late nineties resulted in tremendous additions to the amount of money then in circulation. Financial and economic conditions improved materially. The free silver sentiment went into decline, and gradually ceased to figure in national politics. However, the apostles of free coinage at 16 to 1 insisted that their quantitative theory of money had been vindicated by that flow of gold from Alaska.

Only those who lived during that era know what a hold William Jennings Bryan had upon millions of American people, mostly hard-run farmers and poorly paid factory workers. My wife had an uncle who was a great Bible student. He went from place to place, with Bible in hand, to prove from inspired passages that Bryan was the fulfillment of prophecies incident to the second coming of Christ. Policies Bryan advocated would, when adopted, be proclaimed, usher in the 1000 year era of peace and prosperity that was described in the Book of Revelations.

Bryan became the chief figure on Chautauqua circuits. He drew the largest crowds and was paid the largest salary. His addresses, however, usually proved disappointing, though devoted to higher standards of citizenship. This was because he talked in conversational tones when most of his hearers wanted to hear some of the oratory on which his fame had been builded.

To the metropolitan press and national magazines, all of which were relentless in their attitudes towards him, Bryan handed a tremendous weapon for ridicule and denunciation when he volunteered to assist in the prosecution of a Tennessee school teacher who was charged with advocating the theory of evolution.

Immediately following his very unexpected death, however, practically all the big newspapers and magazines paid tribute to the example he had set as a citizen and to his sincerity in connection with things he advocated.

The last time I saw William Jennings Bryan was when he shared his double seat on a Wabash train with Mrs. Blanton and me. He, too, had been to the annual Journalism Week banquet at Columbia and was lugging back to his Nebraska home one of the huge baskets of gifts each banqueter had received. We found him very companionable.

PRAYING FOR RAIN

In the middle seventies, when Hardin was Governor of Missouri, this locality, and most of the state, was invaded by huge swarms of grasshoppers. There is no living thing more voracious than a grasshopper or more difficult for a farmer to deal with. As the damage and danger increased, Gov. Hardin, who was a devout Baptist, called upon Missouri people to meet in their churches on an appointed day and pray for relief. On the eve of that day the grasshoppers vanished, and everybody heaved a sign of relief.

This recalls the old custom of praying for rain. It often was invoked when crops began suffering from lack of moisture. I remember particularly a meeting that was held in Paris, Mo., when I was a boy. Farmers flocked in from far and near. As the hour for prayer approached, a dark cloud formed in the northwest and began spreading across the sky. Within a few minutes rain was falling in torrents. The meeting was converted into a praise service, with prayers of thanksgiving to God for what was happening on the outside.

I gained nation-wide notoriety for a headline across the top of my first page during the first Roosevelt administration. The crops were suffering from a prolonged run of heat and drouth. Disaster seemed just around the corner. My headline, in 60-point type read: "Lord, we confess our sins, We ask forgiveness. We pray for rain."

While the press was still running, rain began to fall. The drouth was broken. The crops were saved. Instead of thanking God, however, the people thanked me. At every turn for two or three weeks people stopped to shake my hand and express appreciation for that headline. Unfortunately for me, the rain kept falling. It continued through September, October, and November. As the rainfall increased, my prestige decreased to a point where I took the other side of the street when a farmer approached. By the first week of December people looked upon me as Public Enemy No. 1. Most of their lespedeza and soybean harvest was not possible until January.

There was a lesson in all this, which was that God still hears and answers prayer.

LARGE FAMILIES THE RULE

When I was a boy large families were the rule. Eight to ten children were not considered worthy of special mention. A good many families had more. There were five boys and five girls in our family, eight of whom were taught the printer's trade and used, as needed, for setting type and running presses in my father's newspaper plant.

In our home, as in most of the others during the seventies and eighties, there were only two outside doors. One, in front, opened into the parental room. The other, in the rear, opened into the kitchen for the convenience of those who carried wood and water into the house and for those who carried the ashes out.

Those of the children who were away from home after dark had to use the front door. This enabled our mother to keep a check on things. The lamp, with wick turned low was kept burning until the last son or daughter passed through on their way to bed.

Most of the houses were too small, judged by the modern policy of a room for each child. In our home east of the courthouse during the early eighties, the four older boys, including myself, slept upstairs, occupying two beds which were set on opposite sides of the room.

During the marble season, when every body's pants pockets bulged with what had been won in games of keeps or acquired by barter, I became wide awake at 4 o'clock one summer morning inspired by the crowing of our family rooster, I began amusing myself by imitating him. Finaly my other brother, Charley, who later became famous as editor of the Sikeston Standard, picked up his trousers and said: "Now, you little devil, if you do that again, you'll get something you don't like." After a dignified pause, I crowed again-- and Charley let fly, just as Anderson, who shared the bed with me, sat up to see what all the fuss was about.

Mistaking him for me, Charley hurled the marble - laden pants directly into his countenance. Anderson's shrieks could be heard all over the neighborhood. It was only a matter of minutes until my father and mother and most of the others were at the scene, demanding an explanation. When the facts came out, I was adjudged guilty and given a whipping that will never be forgotten. But what was tragedy to me at that time became comedy for the family during many future years.

The trundle bed was a necessary piece of furniture in most every large family. It was so constructed that it could be rolled under the parental bed in the morning and hauled out for use every night. Two or three of the youngest children occupied it. Only those whose memories include the comfort, safety and assurance incident to sleeping in a trundle bed, with father and mother just a few feet away after lights were out and darkness impenetrable, know what life in a trundle bed really was.

VISITING BOY FRIEND ON FARM

When I was a boy the biggest experience, next to riding a railway coach, was a visit with a boy friend out in the country. The town boy usually was more or less a nuisance to the hosts because he so frequently upset the regular order, and was so inefficient in his attempts to be useful.

I recall a week of romance, comedy and ragedy in which I figured out on the Jere Baker farm, southeast of Paris, Mo. My mother hesitated about letting me go, but yielded when Mr. Baker said he would treat me as a member of the family instead of as a guest. He did. And this explains why I thinned corn, drove cattle to distant watering places and helped at keeping the kitchen woodbox filled.

In fact, I tried to do everything Mr. Baker's son, Charley did; partly because of the novelty of the jobs, but principally because the sooner he got them done, the more time he would have for play.

The first day out, Charley inveigled me into riding the cow home from an outlying pasture. As she passed through the gate, I sprang upon her back from the gatepost and had the thrill of my life hanging on while she made a dash for the barn lot. All would have been well except for all the bars being down except the top one. The cow went under it in a sort of dive, brushing me off like a fly. Mr. Baker started to scold about thus using a gentle milk cow for a circus stunt but ended up with a boisterous fit of laughter at the plight in which I found myself.

Charley milked the cow and gave me the first lesson in that fine art. He always drank a cup of the warm milk. We wasted a lot more trying to see which of us could get a stream of milk in the other's mouth at the longest distance. It was pretty messy fun. Mr. Baker did not approve of it.

The family home was small and the family was large. Charley's quarters were in the attic. He reached them by climbing a ladder. I was assigned to a place in his bed during my stay. Climbing that ladder and plunging into the waiting feather bed every night was the biggest sort of thrill. And no sooner would we get into bed than a debate would start on the subject of which was the most important place in the scheme of things, the town or the country. We never reached a conclusion, however, because Charley's father always got tired of our arguing and yelled for silence.

There was a preliminary to our departure for the attic which I shall never forget. It was the family prayer. Attendance was mandatory. Every member of the family and every visitor was there. After reading a chapter from a very large Bible, Mr. Baker would kneel. All the others knelt, too, through the very fervent prayer he would offer. A reverent silence prevailed as we rose from our knees and made off for bed. That was my first introduction to the family altar. It is a institution that could be restored with profit to modern home life, provided it were possible to assemble a modern family under one roof at one time.

The tragic part of my visit came on Sunday. I prevailed on Charley to go swimming in the near-by river, which was contrary to Baker family rules. There was a saw mill near where we went in. From it we procured a large slab apiece, on which we were paddling downstream and having the time of our lives when a sudden whoop out the bank spoled everything. The whoop was emitted by Mr. Baker, who also was cutting a very wicked looking switch from a convenient hickory tree. While Charley was getting such a whipping as only righteous indignation would inspire, I began skulling through the timber towards the house. As I looked back to see whether Charley had been killed, Mr. Baker shook the switch in my direction.

"Just a little more provocation, young man, and you'll get some of it, too!"

Thoroughly terrified, I hurried to the house and asked Charley's mother what to do. She advised that I hurry out to the barn and wait until things had calmed down, which I did. Early in the afternoon she sent my dinner down by Charley, by supper time the incident seemed to have been forgotten, though a sense of guilt overtook me as we all knelt that night and Mr. Baker prayed for those who did not remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy.

Report Booming Vehicle Registration

Vehicle registrations should exceed 106 million within the next decade, according to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. This fact, coupled with new vehicle sales expected to climb and continue at 9 to 10 million per year, makes the car wash franchise owner happy anticipating continued future growth.

A current trend in auto laundry equipment is an automatic system that will wash a car in two minutes while the driver remains in his vehicle. One such manufacturer, Kwiki Systems, Inc. Leawood, Kansas, offer individual franchisees automatic equipment featuring a stainless steel traveling arm that moves around the car electrically on an overhead track, as five spinners shower the car with detergent and rinse water. The charge for an automatic car wash is 50¢ and since each car requires two minutes to clean, the franchisee can earn up to $30 per hour, day in and day out, according to Kwiki Systems.

When I Was A Boy

Since the publication of the late H. J. (Jack) Blanton's "When I Was A Boy" reminiscenes in book form in 1942, they have become increasingly popular. All the books have been sold, and are difficult to obtain. Because of the increasing demand for these articles, the Standard is reprinting them during the next few weeks in the belief that its readers, young and old, will enjoy reading about 70 to 100 years ago. Clip and save them.

THE FREE SILVER ER/

When I was a boy, one of the best-sellers in book departments was "Coin's Financial School." It purported to be questions by a seeker for truth about the free coinage of silver, and answers which showed what adoption of that policy would do for the common man.

Million of copies were sold. My father offered a copy, free of charge, to every person who paid his subscription to our paper for one year in advance. The demand was tremendous.

Only those who lived during the free coinage agitation have any idea what a hold it took upon the minds of people who were the victims of conditions, whatever they were, which contributed to hard times incident to the eighties and nineties. Readers of Coin's Financial School were convinced that most every economic and financial ill dated from the demonetization of silver.

William Jennings Bryan, who came to leadership of the silver forces by virtue of his controlling voice in the Democratic national Convention in Chicago, carried the war into gold standard citadels in the East and North, preaching the quantitative theory of money. By admitting silver to government mints and adding many millions of silver dollars and silver certificates as circulating mediums, he argued, money would become so plentiful that workers would get higher wages, farmers would get more for their products, and prosperity would spread to every nook and corner of the nation.

Wall Street and the bankers became whipping boys for Bryan and his followers. The fact that Britain had been on the gold standard through many decades was used as evidence that evils come of a conspiracy between British and American bankers which had culminated in the closing of our mints to silver.

Discovery of gold in Alaska in the late nineties resulted in tremendous additions to the amount of money then in circulation. Financial and economic conditions improved materially. The free silver sentiment went into decline, and gradually ceased to figure in national politics. However, the apostles of free coinage at 16 to 1 insisted that their quantitative theory of money had been vindicated by that flow of gold from Alaska.

Only those who lived during that era know what a hold William Jennings Bryan had upon millions of American people, mostly hard-run farmers and poorly paid factory workers. My wife had an uncle who was a great Bible student. He went from place to place, with Bible in hand, to prove from inspired passages that Bryan was the fulfillment of prophecies incident to the second coming of Christ. Policies Bryan advocated would, when adopted, be proclaimed, usher in the 1000 year era of peace and prosperity that was described in the Book of Revelations.

Bryan became the chief figure on Chautauqua circuits. He drew the largest crowds and was paid the largest salary. His addresses, however, usually proved disappointing, though devoted to higher standards of citizenship. This was because he talked in conversational tones when most of his hearers wanted to hear some of the oratory on which his fame had been builded.

To the metropolitan press and national magazines, all of which were relentless in their attitudes towards him, Bryan handed a tremendous weapon for ridicule and denunciation when he volunteered to assist in the prosecution of a Tennessee school teacher who was charged with advocating the theory of evolution.

Immediately following his very unexpected death, however, practically all the big newspapers and magazines paid tribute to the example he had set as a citizen and to his sincerity in connection with things he advocated.

The last time I saw William Jennings Bryan was when he shared his double seat on a Wabash train with Mrs. Blanton and me. He, too, had been to the annual Journalism Week banquet at Columbia and was lugging back to his Nebraska home one of the huge baskets of gifts each banqueter had received. We found him very companionable.

PRAYING FOR RAIN

In the middle seventies, when Hardin was Governor of Missouri, this locality, and most of the state, was invaded by huge swarms of grasshoppers. There is no living thing more voracious than a grasshopper or more difficult for a farmer to deal with. As the damage and danger increased, Gov. Hardin, who was a devout Baptist, called upon Missouri people to meet in their churches on an appointed day and pray for relief. On the eve of that day the grasshoppers vanished, and everybody heaved a sign of relief.

This recalls the old custom of praying for rain. It often was invoked when crops began suffering from lack of moisture. I remember particularly a meeting that was held in Paris, Mo., when I was a boy. Farmers flocked in from far and near. As the hour for prayer approached, a dark cloud formed in the northwest and began spreading across the sky. Within a few minutes rain was falling in torrents. The meeting was converted into a praise service, with prayers of thanksgiving to God for what was happening on the outside.

I gained nation-wide notoriety for a headline across the top of my first page during the first Roosevelt administration. The crops were suffering from a prolonged run of heat and drouth. Disaster seemed just around the corner. My headline, in 60-point type read: "Lord, we confess our sins, We ask forgiveness. We pray for rain."

While the press was still running, rain began to fall. The drouth was broken. The crops were saved. Instead of thanking God, however, the people thanked me. At every turn for two or three weeks people stopped to shake my hand and express appreciation for that headline. Unfortunately for me, the rain kept falling. It continued through September, October, and November. As the rainfall increased, my prestige decreased to a point where I took the other side of the street when a farmer approached. By the first week of December people looked upon me as Public Enemy No. 1. Most of their lespedeza and soybean harvest was not possible until January.

There was a lesson in all this, which was that God still hears and answers prayer.

LARGE FAMILIES THE RULE

When I was a boy large families were the rule. Eight to ten children were not considered worthy of special mention. A good many families had more. There were five boys and five girls in our family, eight of whom were taught the printer's trade and used, as needed, for setting type and running presses in my father's newspaper plant.

In our home, as in most of the others during the seventies and eighties, there were only two outside doors. One, in front, opened into the parental room. The other, in the rear, opened into the kitchen for the convenience of those who carried wood and water into the house and for those who carried the ashes out.

Those of the children who were away from home after dark had to use the front door. This enabled our mother to keep a check on things. The lamp, with wick turned low was kept burning until the last son or daughter passed through on their way to bed.

Most of the houses were too small, judged by the modern policy of a room for each child. In our home east of the courthouse during the early eighties, the four older boys, including myself, slept upstairs, occupying two beds which were set on opposite sides of the room.

During the marble season, when every body's pants pockets bulged with what had been won in games of keeps or acquired by barter, I became wide awake at 4 o'clock one summer morning inspired by the crowing of our family rooster, I began amusing myself by imitating him. Finaly my other brother, Charley, who later became famous as editor of the Sikeston Standard, picked up his trousers and said: "Now, you little devil, if you do that again, you'll get something you don't like." After a dignified pause, I crowed again-- and Charley let fly, just as Anderson, who shared the bed with me, sat up to see what all the fuss was about.

Mistaking him for me, Charley hurled the marble - laden pants directly into his countenance. Anderson's shrieks could be heard all over the neighborhood. It was only a matter of minutes until my father and mother and most of the others were at the scene, demanding an explanation. When the facts came out, I was adjudged guilty and given a whipping that will never be forgotten. But what was tragedy to me at that time became comedy for the family during many future years.

The trundle bed was a necessary piece of furniture in most every large family. It was so constructed that it could be rolled under the parental bed in the morning and hauled out for use every night. Two or three of the youngest children occupied it. Only those whose memories include the comfort, safety and assurance incident to sleeping in a trundle bed, with father and mother just a few feet away after lights were out and darkness impenetrable, know what life in a trundle bed really was.

VISITING BOY FRIEND ON FARM

When I was a boy the biggest experience, next to riding a railway coach, was a visit with a boy friend out in the country. The town boy usually was more or less a nuisance to the hosts because he so frequently upset the regular order, and was so inefficient in his attempts to be useful.

I recall a week of romance, comedy and ragedy in which I figured out on the Jere Baker farm, southeast of Paris, Mo. My mother hesitated about letting me go, but yielded when Mr. Baker said he would treat me as a member of the family instead of as a guest. He did. And this explains why I thinned corn, drove cattle to distant watering places and helped at keeping the kitchen woodbox filled.

In fact, I tried to do everything Mr. Baker's son, Charley did; partly because of the novelty of the jobs, but principally because the sooner he got them done, the more time he would have for play.

The first day out, Charley inveigled me into riding the cow home from an outlying pasture. As she passed through the gate, I sprang upon her back from the gatepost and had the thrill of my life hanging on while she made a dash for the barn lot. All would have been well except for all the bars being down except the top one. The cow went under it in a sort of dive, brushing me off like a fly. Mr. Baker started to scold about thus using a gentle milk cow for a circus stunt but ended up with a boisterous fit of laughter at the plight in which I found myself.

Charley milked the cow and gave me the first lesson in that fine art. He always drank a cup of the warm milk. We wasted a lot more trying to see which of us could get a stream of milk in the other's mouth at the longest distance. It was pretty messy fun. Mr. Baker did not approve of it.

The family home was small and the family was large. Charley's quarters were in the attic. He reached them by climbing a ladder. I was assigned to a place in his bed during my stay. Climbing that ladder and plunging into the waiting feather bed every night was the biggest sort of thrill. And no sooner would we get into bed than a debate would start on the subject of which was the most important place in the scheme of things, the town or the country. We never reached a conclusion, however, because Charley's father always got tired of our arguing and yelled for silence.

There was a preliminary to our departure for the attic which I shall never forget. It was the family prayer. Attendance was mandatory. Every member of the family and every visitor was there. After reading a chapter from a very large Bible, Mr. Baker would kneel. All the others knelt, too, through the very fervent prayer he would offer. A reverent silence prevailed as we rose from our knees and made off for bed. That was my first introduction to the family altar. It is a institution that could be restored with profit to modern home life, provided it were possible to assemble a modern family under one roof at one time.

The tragic part of my visit came on Sunday. I prevailed on Charley to go swimming in the near-by river, which was contrary to Baker family rules. There was a saw mill near where we went in. From it we procured a large slab apiece, on which we were paddling downstream and having the time of our lives when a sudden whoop out the bank spoled everything. The whoop was emitted by Mr. Baker, who also was cutting a very wicked looking switch from a convenient hickory tree. While Charley was getting such a whipping as only righteous indignation would inspire, I began skulling through the timber towards the house. As I looked back to see whether Charley had been killed, Mr. Baker shook the switch in my direction.

"Just a little more provocation, young man, and you'll get some of it, too!"

Thoroughly terrified, I hurried to the house and asked Charley's mother what to do. She advised that I hurry out to the barn and wait until things had calmed down, which I did. Early in the afternoon she sent my dinner down by Charley, by supper time the incident seemed to have been forgotten, though a sense of guilt overtook me as we all knelt that night and Mr. Baker prayed for those who did not remember the Sabbath day and keep it holy.

Report Booming Vehicle Registration

Vehicle registrations should exceed 106 million within the next decade, according to the U.S. Chamber of Commerce. This fact, coupled with new vehicle sales expected to climb and continue at 9 to 10 million per year, makes the car wash franchise owner happy anticipating continued future growth.

A current trend in auto laundry equipment is an automatic system that will wash a car in two minutes while the driver remains in his vehicle. One such manufacturer, Kwiki Systems, Inc. Leawood, Kansas, offer individual franchisees automatic equipment featuring a stainless steel traveling arm that moves around the car electrically on an overhead track, as five spinners shower the car with detergent and rinse water. The charge for an automatic car wash is 50¢ and since each car requires two minutes to clean, the franchisee can earn up to $30 per hour, day in and day out, according to Kwiki Systems.

For Do-It-Yourselfers:
Instant Air Pollution

(third of four articles)

"Get your compact, portable, do - it - yourself air polluters today. . ."

It would be pretty hard to sell cigarettes with a line like that, the Missouri Heart Association agrees, but that's actually what every cigarette smoker is buying to feed his habit -- a do - it - yourself air polluter.

Ironically, the millions of Americans who smoke a pack or more a day are among those who are concerned with the health menace of air pollution in our communities. But they have overlooked the fact that, as Dr. William B. Kannel of Framingham, Massachusetts, put it, "smoking cigarettes is the most intense form of self-induced air pollution possible."

Doctors attending a conference on Air Pollution Medical Research in Los Angeles last year held that smoking is more harmful than industrial air pollutants.

The way in which personalized air pollution attacks lung tissues has been demonstrated in the laboratory. As the American Heart Association points out, nature has provided the normal respiratory system with a self - cleansing action that protects the lungs from harmful substances. In this system, the trachea and bronchial tubes (the windpipe and its branches) are lined with cilia -- tiny, hairlike projections of tissue that move constantly, sweeping impurities out of the respiratory tract.

But when tobacco smoke is inhaled, with its mixture of gases, tars, and other irritants, the cleansing action slows down and , in time, may even stop. This allows smoke particles, dust, tars, smog chemicals and bacteria to irritate the lungs and throat, establishing a foothold for disease.

That tobacco smoke immobilizes the body's defenses against infection was demonstrated recently in a series of experiments at Harvard and Boston City Hospital. The high correlation between heavy cigfection in chronic bronchitis led doctors there to investigate the relationship. They found that the body's anti- bacterial mechanisms were put out of action by brief exposure to cigarette smoke. A few puffs of smoke, they found, were enough to keep bacteria alive and thriving in an antibacterial culture that would have killed them off otherwise.

Both laboratory and statistical data furnished still another kind of evidence, on the optimistic side of the ledger. Biopsy studies of ex-smokers showed that some of them had pre - cancerous lung cells at the time they stopped. In those who had not yet developed cancer, the abnormal cells disappeared over a period of years and were replaced by normal, healthy cells.

Statistical data are even more encouraging. Among people who give up smoking, the death rate declines rapidly until, after a few years, it is nearly the same as that of people who never smoked.

"The beneficial effect of stopping smoking appears to be immediate, even if one has been smoking for years," says Dr. Samuel Proger, Professor and Chairman of the Department of Medicine at Tufts University School of Medicine. "I know of no other situation," he adds, "which we can associate with serious increases of coronary heart disease and which, when corrected, has been proved to show a demonstrable improvement."

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Cape Girardeau may have a new commuter -- type airline soon.

Caleshu is flying into Cape Girardeau Monday to discuss his plans with airport board members. He must obtain their approval before service can begin.

When final plans are activited, Caleshu said his airline will furnish regular flights throughout Missouri, in southern Illinois and eastern Kentucky.

"Service begins Monday in central and northwestern Missouri," he said. "And within two weeks we plan to begin serving the three - state area."

Other cities to be served include St. Louis, Kansas City, Joplin, Columbia , Springfield, Roll and St. Joseph.

The airline flight operations will be what the Civil Aeronautics Board terms a third-level airline. This means the airline does not need CAB approval. It is regulated only by the Federal Aviation Agency.

Madrid Group Adamant on Pond Study

CHARLESTON -- An attempt to have a study made of ways to improve the Ten-Mile Pond watershed struck another snag Saturday, despite efforts of Governor Warren Hearnes to mediate a dispute between Mississippi and New Madrid County officials.

Representatives of the two counties met Saturday at the Charlestonian, with the Governor acting as moderator, and heard R. H. "Bob" Landers, area engineer with the Soil Conservation Service, Cape Girardeau, describe steps that would be taken before recommendations made in such a study could be implemented.

New Madrid County interests headed by A. C. Riley of the St. John's Levee District, have been adamant in their refusal to discuss the Ten-Mile Pond watershed study. Riley told the group Saturday that the people of New Madrid County did not want runoff water from Mississippi County coming through their drainage system.

He alleged that once the New Madrid County Court signed an agreement to permit the preliminary study to be made, it would be unable to veto any work that might be recommended by the study.

MISSISSIPPI County Presiding Judge Bill Winchester introduced Landers, who assured the group that under Soil and Water Conservation Service Procedures, the county court would have a chance to disapprove the survey, and by doing so, would block further development of a "work plan" by his agency.

Landers' assurances apparently failed to impress the New Madrid County group, as no agreement was reached during the meeting.

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

SYMBOL OF FAITH

To the world's 400 million Moslems, the beautiful prayer carpets of Islam are symbols of faith. The faithful are called to pray five times a day wherever they might be because all the earth belongs to Allah. The thing that marks off the prayer site as sacred is the prayer carpet.

The call to prayer is one of the five "pillars" or principal acts of faith of Islam. Islam means "submission" to the will of God, and a Moslem is "one who submits."

Islam, the newest of man's great universal religions, was founded early in the seventh century by Mohammed, who was inspired by the Jewish and Christian worship of one God.

Christ's gift to youth...

CONFIDENCE!

Did you ever notice that young people who have an unshakeable faith in their immortality are seldom gravely troubled by the doubts and insecurities of youth?

Their minds accept without question the promise made by Christ of another and eternal life to which this one is only a prelude. And this faith is a balm to the spirit . . . the surest cure for anxiety that man has ever known.

Surely, if you thought that this life, with all its tribulations, was the only life . . . how could you ever find the lasting happiness that man naturally longs for?

Many young people today do not wholly accept belief in God. Many do not believe unreservedly the teachings of Christ. Most often, it's because Christianity has never been clearly explained to them . . . or because they have been bewildered by varying interpretations of Christ's word. As a result, millions of our young people are denying themselves spiritual comfort and confidence during the years when they need them most.

Study the original teachings of Christ!

Through Peter, the first Pope, Christ founded the Catholic Church which, through the centuries, has passed along His teachings to mankind.

When you study these teachings, the meaning of your existence on earth becomes clear . . . and with this understanding, you may find the "faith that makes man whole" . . . and the solace of knowing your soul will live forever.

Victory Over Death

Easter is over but there remains an afterglow of truth and reality. Dr. F. B. Meyer, a great Christian of another generation expressed part of this reality in a letter he wrote to a friend a day or two before his death, "I have just heard, to my surprise, that I have only a few days to live. It may be that before this reaches you I shall have entered the palace. Don't trouble to write. We shall meet in the morning. With much love, Yours affectionately, F. B. Meyer." It takes deep communion with a living Christ to achieve such a personal victory as Mr. Meyer had reached. Worship helps. We invite you to worship with us at Trinity Baptist Church, 110 E. Center Street, this Sunday, at 10:30 a.m.

Cape Ponders Commuter Air Service

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Cape Girardeau may have a new commuter -- type airline soon.

Sun Airline Corp. of Rolla has announced plans to start twice-a-day cargo and passenger flights April 10, pending Municipal Airport board approval.

"Included in the daily schedule," said Airline President George Caleshu, "are flights directly connecting Cape Girardeau with Jefferson City, Paducah, Ky., and Carbondale, Ill."

Caleshu is flying into Cape Girardeau Monday to discuss his plans with airport board members. He must obtain their approval before service can begin.

When final plans are activited, Caleshu said his airline will furnish regular flights throughout Missouri, in southern Illinois and eastern Kentucky.

"Service begins Monday in central and northwestern Missouri," he said. "And within two weeks we plan to begin serving the three - state area."

Other cities to be served include St. Louis, Kansas City, Joplin, Columbia, Springfield, Roll and St. Joseph.

The airline flight operations will be what the Civil Aeronautics Board terms a third-level airline. This means the airline does not need CAB approval. It is regulated only by the Federal Aviation Agency.

Madrid Group Adamant on Pond Study

CHARLESTON -- An attempt to have a study made of ways to improve the Ten-Mile Pond watershed struck another snag Saturday, despite efforts of Governor Warren Hearnes to mediate a dispute between Mississippi and New Madrid County officials.

Representatives of the two counties met Saturday at the Charlestonian, with the Governor acting as moderator, and heard R. H. "Bob" Landers, area engineer with the Soil Conservation Service, Cape Girardeau, describe steps that would be taken before recommendations made in such a study could be implemented.

New Madrid County interests headed by A. C. Riley of the St. John's Levee District, have been adamant in their refusal to discuss the Ten-Mile Pond watershed study. Riley told the group Saturday that the people of New Madrid County did not want runoff water from Mississippi County coming through their drainage system.

He alleged that once the New Madrid County Court signed an agreement to permit the preliminary study to be made, it would be unable to veto any work that might be recommended by the study.

MISSISSIPPI County Presiding Judge Bill Winchester introduced Landers, who assured the group that under Soil and Water Conservation Service Procedures, the county court would have a chance to disapprove the survey, and by doing so, would block further development of a "work plan" by his agency.

Landers' assurances apparently failed to impress the New Madrid County group, as no agreement was reached during the meeting.

Christ's gift to youth...

CONFIDENCE!

Did you ever notice that young people who have an unshakeable faith in their immortality are seldom gravely troubled by the doubts and insecurities of youth?

Their minds accept without question the promise made by Christ of another and eternal life to which this one is only a prelude. And this faith is a balm to the spirit . . . the surest cure for anxiety that man has ever known.

Surely, if you thought that this life, with all its tribulations, was the only life . . . how could you ever find the lasting happiness that man naturally longs for?

Many young people today do not wholly accept belief in God. Many do not believe unreservedly the teachings of Christ. Most often, it's because Christianity has never been clearly explained to them . . . or because they have been bewildered by varying interpretations of Christ's word. As a result, millions of our young people are denying themselves spiritual comfort and confidence during the years when they need them most.

Study the original teachings of Christ!

Through Peter, the first Pope, Christ founded the Catholic Church which, through the centuries, has passed along His teachings to mankind.

When you study these teachings, the meaning of your existence on earth becomes clear . . . and with this understanding, you may find the "faith that makes man whole" . . . and the solace of knowing your soul will live forever.

Victory Over Death

Easter is over but there remains an afterglow of truth and reality. Dr. F. B. Meyer, a great Christian of another generation expressed part of this reality in a letter he wrote to a friend a day or two before his death, "I have just heard, to my surprise, that I have only a few days to live. It may be that before this reaches you I shall have entered the palace. Don't trouble to write. We shall meet in the morning. With much love, Yours affectionately, F. B. Meyer." It takes deep communion with a living Christ to achieve such a personal victory as Mr. Meyer had reached. Worship helps. We invite you to worship with us at Trinity Baptist Church, 110 E. Center Street, this Sunday, at 10:30 a.m.

Sincerely

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

SYMBOL OF FAITH

To the world's 400 million Moslems, the beautiful prayer carpets of Islam are symbols of faith. The faithful are called to pray five times a day wherever they might be because all the earth belongs to Allah. The thing that marks off the prayer site as sacred is the prayer carpet.

The call to prayer is one of the five "pillars" or principal acts of faith of Islam. Islam means "submission" to the will of God, and a Moslem is "one who submits."

Islam, the newest of man's great universal religions, was founded early in the seventh century by Mohammed, who was inspired by the Jewish and Christian worship of one God.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: I was interested in the letter from the West Virginia reader who wrote that she was afraid to be around women at work who had had cancer operations. The writer said she knew it was crazy but she just couldn't help it.

I, too, have a fear of cancer, but my story is different. Please print this letter because there are thousands like me and we need the moral support and understanding of the public.

Three years ago I was operated on for a malignancy. The doctor praised me for coming in at the first sign of trouble. He said I was very wise and very lucky. He assured my husband that the operation was a complete success and said we shouldn't worry. He told me that if I get through five years without a recurrence I could consider myself cured.

I have two years to go and my mind is never at rest. Every day I look for cancer symptoms on my own - hoping and praying I don't find any. At night I go to bed with a prayer, "Dear God, please let everything be o.k."

My children are still in school. My husband is not in the best of health. They need me. Every day is precious now. My burden, and the burden of those who share my problems is heavy. The thought that some people are afraid to be near me is demoralizing and depressing.

Medical science has made tremendous strides in the fight against cancer but there is still so much ignorance - like that of the woman from West Virginia. Your column has educated millions of readers on subjects people don't want to talk about. Will you please print this letter and ask for compassion and understanding for those of us who are fighting a very difficult battle? - A LADY FROM OHIO

Dear Lady: Here is your letter and I am asking for more than compassion and understanding. I am asking for money.

Cancer research is costly. Education and services must be paid for. Each and every one of us has a personal stake in the battle against cancer. Fortunate (and rare) is the family that has not been touched by this dread killer. About 50 million Americans now living will eventually have cancer. This is one out of every four persons in the United States.

I urge everyone who reads this column to respond to the appeal of the American Cancer Society. And be generous, please. Your contribution means the difference between life and death. - ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I was very much interested in the letter from the Cleveland woman whose husband has been begging her to accept a mink coat for her 20th wedding anniversary. She said she was going through the change. The hot flashes were driving her crazy. "I don't need a mink coat," she moaned. "What I need is a fan."

I have been married for 21 years and I have been wanting a mink coat for a long time. I live in San Francisco and the weather can get pretty chilly out here. Please tell the Cleveland woman that I will gladly send her a fan if she will send me the mink. - BAY AREA SHIVERS

Dear Goldie Goodheart: Here's your letter and lotsa luck. If we don't get a response out of Mrs. Cleveland, how about trying for a hot water bottle?

M-Missing.

I actually did run into a door and had a beautiful shiner on the night when my husband's poker club met at our house. As I walked through the room where the game was just starting, the men all stopped talking to stare at my eye.

My husband regained their attention by remarking, "We almost didn't have our party here tonight . . ."

The other men all looked at him with what I can only describe as pure admiration.

RENTICARE vs INCENTIVE

Before the year is out, many thousands of Americans will be moving into new or freshly renovated apartments. They will enjoy the wall-to-wall carpeting, the electric garbage disposal units and other niceties. These individuals will have special reason to enjoy their newfound comfort. The reason why is that the niceties will be paid for by the taxpayers.

The reference here is to the beneficiaries of the Great Society's rent subsidy program, sometimes known as Renticare. Under this program, poor families - or, in some cases, mothers with illegitimate children -- will move out of the slums into taxpayer - financed housing. To qualify for this handout, a family must not have an income above $4,300 a year. The head of the household pays a fixed percentage of his or her income for rent; Uncle Sam pays the rest.

President Johnson says that Renticare is "the single most important breakthrough in the history of public hosing." It would be more accurate to describe rent subsidies as the single biggest blow at self-reliance in many a year.

To be sure, there is rising congressional opposition to the plan because of the increase in the cost of defending Vietnam. But it will be a shame if opposition to renticare is based solely on the general cost of government this year. Renticare is not only costly; it is wrong.

Why does one reach that conclusion? The answer is that a rent subsidy gives a man or woman a stake in being a ward of the government. If a bureaucrat gives a person a comfortable apartment with wall-to-wall carpeting, it isn't reasonable to suppose that a former slum dweller will want to leave such comfort and try to make a place for himself on his own.

We know from the record of welfarism in the United States that the army of welfare careerists is growing year by year. A New York World Journal Tribune writer recently cited the case of a woman reliefer in New York City who openly admitted intending to take society for a ride in getting relief and other welfare benefits. The result, as the World Journal Tribune writer said, is an "unconscionable drain on your taxes and mine."

Renticare is the ultimate for welfare careerists. Once on renticare, one can be sure that a public dependent will never get off unless forced off. Rent subsidy strikes at the incentive system of our society. If there is no need to work for the comfortable things in life, many people -- the drone element, at least -- simply won't work.

Rent subsidies should not be thought of as a small program. The Wall Street Journal reports that the program could cost up to $6 billion. As this money is spent, it will eat into the morale of our working people. What is John Doe, an industrial worker, to think about such a program? In all likelihood, he works as many hours as possible in order to get ahead and give his family a higher standard of living. Not every hard-working American enjoys wall-to-wall carpeting and electric garbage disposal units. If he sees a drone family given things he can't afford on the basis of his work, he is likely to become infuriated with the workings of his society. He will feel cheated, and rightly so.

Hard-working citizens are cheated by Great Society planners and administrators when more is given to non-workers and drones than a working man can buy through his own labor. Indeed it is outrageous that productive citizens should be penalized so that non-productive people can have a free ride at public expense. Rent subsidies violate, therefore, the basic operational concepts of our free enterprise system. They strike directly at the concept of work and monetary returns in accordance with the amount one works.

The Wall Street Journal points out that at the end of last year in one of the big slum areas of Cleveland where renticare is operating there were more than 10,000 unwed mothers and 33,000 illegitimate children receiving welfare aid.

Why is the Great Society pushing the renticare program? Well, it seems that there is more to it than meets the eye. For example, if the bureaucrats can place slum families in middle - class apartments, they have the power to upset and juggle neighborhoods, which is what they clearly want to do. Statements by Harold Howe II, U.S. Commissioner of Education, make plain his determination to break up the neighborhood school system. One way of doing this is by busing of students. Another is by directly tackling the neighborhoods by sending slum families into the suburbs. Anyone who doesn't believe the masters of the Great Society wouldn't go this far in shattering our national way of life simply hasn't read the fine print in the Great Society programs. Renticare thus not only strikes at self-reliance but is a tool for breaking up the patterns of existing neighborhoods.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE

By Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE T.V. BANDIT

"Midnight Max" stole TV sets from motels. Well dressed and with a lilt to his walk, he'd register at a motel under a false name, and guzzle down a drink or two, courtesy of room service, until the stroke of midnight. Then, with all the grace of a more dignified jewel thief he would depart the motel through the nearest window with the TV set that had graced his room neatly tucked under his arm. When finally caught, Max had more television sets in his house than Chesterfield had cigarettes.

Charged with burglary, Max insisted that the case be dismissed.

"I can't be convicted on that charge," he told the judge. "I know the law. Burglary requires a breaking and entry. Well! The fact is I never broke into a motel in my life. I was always ushered in with all the pomp and ceremony of any other nattily dressed guest."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you let Max off the hook?

This is how the judge ruled: Max went to jail. The judge held that it is as derelict to trick one into an entry as to shove one's fist through a glass door, though the latter may be more hazardous and painful.

TODAY'S LEGAL POINTER:

A telephone number is often represented to be a valuable "asset" of a business when the business is being sold. However, don't bank on being able to obtain that number for sure if you buy the business. While a telephone company will frequently permit the number to be transferred upon a sale, the number, technically, is not an asset of the business. When a telephone subscriber is assigned a number, he does not acquire a property interest in that number.

Missouri Senators Ask Land Tax Amendment

WASHINGTON - Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) and Sen. Edward V. Long (D-Mo) have requested an amendment to the internal revenue code to allow for more equitable tax treatment for landowners forced to sell their property by condemnation or threat of condemnation for government programs such as flood control reservoirs and road construction.

"The purpose of this proposal is to broaden the types of replacement property which could qualify for deferall on capital gains tax," the Missouri Senators reported.

"Often the value of the land taken has been built up over many years, or even generations." The Senators said further that "We do not believe it fair to force the sale of property and then insist on payment of capital gains taxes when it is practically impossible for the owner to buy suitable replacement realty in the general vicinity."

Under the present law, in order to postpone the payment of capital gains tax, a landowner's choice of replacement property is limited to real property. The Senators' amendment would permit the landowner to make unrelated income producing investments where it would be impractical or work an undue hardship for the seller to buy real property.

Patterned after a recommendation made in the 88th Congress by a House Public Works staff study, the Missouri Senators said that they hope their proposal will meet previous objections from the treasury department, thus improving chances of passage in Congress.

The amendment will be added to Title VIII of S.698, introduced on January 26 by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (D-Me.) and soon to be taken up by Muskie's intergovernmental operations subcommittee.

Chemist Discounts Narcotic Effect of Banana Peel Smoking

RIVERSIDE, CALIF. (AP) -A University of California chemist says the effects of smoking baked banana peels, the latest rage among the the hippies, are all in the head.

Dr. Junji Kumamoto, of the university's agriculture department, says the only substance in the peels even slightly narcotic is ethyl acetate, sometimes used in paint. And it evaporates when the peel is baked. Thus, he contends, any narcotic effect is probably imagined.

ANN LANDERS

Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: I was interested in the letter from the West Virginia reader who wrote that she was afraid to be around women at work who had had cancer operations. The writer said she knew it was crazy but she just couldn't help it.

I, too, have a fear of cancer, but my story is different. Please print this letter because there are thousands like me and we need the moral support and understanding of the public.

Three years ago I was operated on for a malignancy. The doctor praised me for coming in at the first sign of trouble. He said I was very wise and very lucky. He assured my husband that the operation was a complete success and said we shouldn't worry. He told me that if I get through five years without a recurrence I could consider myself cured.

I have two years to go and my mind is never at rest. Every day I look for cancer symptoms on my own - hoping and praying I don't find any. At night I go to bed with a prayer, "Dear God, please let everything be o.k."

My children are still in school. My husband is not in the best of health. They need me. Every day is precious now. My burden, and the burden of those who share my problems is heavy. The thought that some people are afraid to be near me is demoralizing and depressing.

Medical science has made tremendous strides in the fight against cancer but there is still so much ignorance - like that of the woman from West Virginia. Your column has educated millions of readers on subjects people don't want to talk about. Will you please print this letter and ask for compassion and understanding for those of us who are fighting a very difficult battle? - A LADY FROM OHIO

Dear Lady: Here is your letter and I am asking for more than compassion and understanding. I am asking for money.

Cancer research is costly. Education and services must be paid for. Each and every one of us has a personal stake in the battle against cancer. Fortunate (and rare) is the family that has not been touched by this dread killer. About 50 million Americans now living will eventually have cancer. This is one out of every four persons in the United States.

I urge everyone who reads this column to respond to the appeal of the American Cancer Society. And be generous, please. Your contribution means the difference between life and death. - ANN LANDERS

Dear Ann Landers: I was very much interested in the letter from the Cleveland woman whose husband has been begging her to accept a mink coat for her 20th wedding anniversary. She said she was going through the change. The hot flashes were driving her crazy. "I don't need a mink coat," she moaned. "What I need is a fan."

I have been married for 21 years and I have been wanting a mink coat for a long time. I live in San Francisco and the weather can get pretty chilly out here. Please tell the Cleveland woman that I will gladly send her a fan if she will send me the mink. - BAY AREA SHIVERS

Dear Goldie Goodheart: Here's your letter and lotsa luck. If we don't get a response out of Mrs. Cleveland, how about trying for a hot water bottle?

I actually did run into a door and had a beautiful shiner on the night when my husband's poker club met at our house. As I walked through the room where the game was just starting, the men all stopped talking to stare at my eye.

My husband regained their attention by remarking, "We almost didn't have our party here tonight . . ."

The other men all looked at him with what I can only describe as pure admiration.

RENTICARE vs INCENTIVE

Before the year is out, many thousands of Americans will be moving into new or freshly renovated apartments. They will enjoy the wall-to-wall carpeting, the electric garbage disposal units and other niceties. These individuals will have special reason to enjoy their newfound comfort. The reason why is that the niceties will be paid for by the taxpayers.

The reference here is to the beneficiaries of the Great Society's rent subsidy program, sometimes known as Renticare. Under this program, poor families - or, in some cases, mothers with illegitimate children -- will move out of the slums into taxpayer - financed housing. To qualify for this handout, a family must not have an income above $4,300 a year. The head of the household pays a fixed percentage of his or her income for rent; Uncle Sam pays the rest.

President Johnson says that Renticare is "the single most important breakthrough in the history of public hosing." It would be more accurate to describe rent subsidies as the single biggest blow at self-reliance in many a year.

To be sure, there is rising congressional opposition to the plan because of the increase in the cost of defending Vietnam. But it will be a shame if opposition to renticare is based solely on the general cost of government this year. Renticare is not only costly; it is wrong.

Why does one reach that conclusion? The answer is that a rent subsidy gives a man or woman a stake in being a ward of the government. If a bureaucrat gives a person a comfortable apartment with wall-to-wall carpeting, it isn't reasonable to suppose that a former slum dweller will want to leave such comfort and try to make a place for himself on his own.

We know from the record of welfarism in the United States that the army of welfare careerists is growing year by year. A New York World Journal Tribune writer recently cited the case of a woman reliefer in New York City who openly admitted intending to take society for a ride in getting relief and other welfare benefits. The result, as the World Journal Tribune writer said, is an "unconscionable drain on your taxes and mine."

Renticare is the ultimate for welfare careerists. Once on renticare, one can be sure that a public dependent will never get off unless forced off. Rent subsidy strikes at the incentive system of our society. If there is no need to work for the comfortable things in life, many people -- the drone element, at least -- simply won't work.

Rent subsidies should not be thought of as a small program. The Wall Street Journal reports that the program could cost up to $6 billion. As this money is spent, it will eat into the morale of our working people. What is John Doe, an industrial worker, to think about such a program? In all likelihood, he works as many hours as possible in order to get ahead and give his family a higher standard of living. Not every hard-working American enjoys wall-to-wall carpeting and electric garbage disposal units. If he sees a drone family given things he can't afford on the basis of his work, he is likely to become infuriated with the workings of his society. He will feel cheated, and rightly so.

Hard-working citizens are cheated by Great Society planners and administrators when more is given to non-workers and drones than a working man can buy through his own labor. Indeed it is outrageous that productive citizens should be penalized so that non-productive people can have a free ride at public expense. Rent subsidies violate, therefore, the basic operational concepts of our free enterprise system. They strike directly at the concept of work and monetary returns in accordance with the amount one works.

The Wall Street Journal points out that at the end of last year in one of the big slum areas of Cleveland where renticare is operating there were more than 10,000 unwed mothers and 33,000 illegitimate children receiving welfare aid.

Why is the Great Society pushing the renticare program? Well, it seems that there is more to it than meets the eye. For example, if the bureaucrats can place slum families in middle - class apartments, they have the power to upset and juggle neighborhoods, which is what they clearly want to do. Statements by Harold Howe II, U.S. Commissioner of Education, make plain his determination to break up the neighborhood school system. One way of doing this is by busing of students. Another is by directly tackling the neighborhoods by sending slum families into the suburbs. Anyone who doesn't believe the masters of the Great Society wouldn't go this far in shattering our national way of life simply hasn't read the fine print in the Great Society programs. Renticare thus not only strikes at self-reliance but is a tool for breaking up the patterns of existing neighborhoods.

THE CASE OF THE T.V. BANDIT

"Midnight Max" stole TV sets from motels. Well dressed and with a lilt to his walk, he'd register at a motel under a false name, and guzzle down a drink or two, courtesy of room service, until the stroke of midnight. Then, with all the grace of a more dignified jewel thief he would depart the motel through the nearest window with the TV set that had graced his room neatly tucked under his arm. When finally caught, Max had more television sets in his house than Chesterfield had cigarettes.

Charged with burglary, Max insisted that the case be dismissed.

Missouri Senators Ask Land Tax Amendment

WASHINGTON - Sen. Stuart Symington (D-Mo) and Sen. Edward V. Long (D-Mo) have requested an amendment to the internal revenue code to allow for more equitable tax treatment for landowners forced to sell their property by condemnation or threat of condemnation for government programs such as flood control reservoirs and road construction.

"The purpose of this proposal is to broaden the types of replacement property which could qualify for deferall on capital gains tax," the Missouri Senators reported.

"Often the value of the land taken has been built up over many years, or even generations." The Senators said further that "We do not believe it fair to force the sale of property and then insist on payment of capital gains taxes when it is practically impossible for the owner to buy suitable replacement realty in the general vicinity."

Under the present law, in order to postpone the payment of capital gains tax, a landowner's choice of replacement property is limited to real property. The Senators' amendment would permit the landowner to make unrelated income producing investments where it would be impractical or work an undue hardship for the seller to buy real property.

Patterned after a recommendation made in the 88th Congress by a House Public Works staff study, the Missouri Senators said that they hope their proposal will meet previous objections from the treasury department, thus improving chances of passage in Congress.

The amendment will be added to Title VIII of S.698, introduced on January 26 by Sen. Edmund S. Muskie (D-Me.) and soon to be taken up by Muskie's intergovernmental operations subcommittee.

Chemist Discounts Narcotic Effect of Banana Peel Smoking

RIVERSIDE, CALIF. (AP) -A University of California chemist says the effects of smoking baked banana peels, the latest rage among the the hippies, are all in the head.

Dr. Junji Kumamoto, of the university's agriculture department, says the only substance in the peels even slightly narcotic is aryl acetate, sometimes used in paint. And it evaporates when the peel is baked. Thus, he contends, any narcotic effect is probably imagined.

1967 average strength, 404,000.

If U.S. casualties continued at the same rate in relation to troop strength for the remainder of 1967, they would total for the year about 15.2 per cent of average strength.

Last year's 35,000 casualties represented about 12.7 per cent of the average U.S. troop strength during 1966.

Earlier this year, Ambassador to Vietnam Henry Cabot Lodge predicted that "the percentage of American casualties will start declining."

The current deadly tempo of fighting was illustrated Thursday as the military command in Saigon announced the United States suffered a record 274 men killed in fighting last week. This compares with the Korean war's weekly average of 255 over 37 months.

At the current rate of losses, the United States could sustain 61,000 casualties this year, approaching Korea's first and most bloody 12 months of battle.

Projecting the first quarter's weekly averages of killed and wounded through 1967 escalates U.S. losses to 8,320 killed and 52,780 wounded for the year. Korea's first year claimed 74,700 casualties -- 21,000 killed and 53,700 wounded.

If this projection held true, the American commitment of life and limb in southeast Asia since 1961 would surge by the end of this year to 104,482 casualties — 14,964 dead, 89,518 wounded.

In the entire Korean campaign, 33,629 American servicement were killed in action. Another 103,284 were wounded. World War II killed 291,557 U. S. fighting men and wounded 470,846.

As of last Saturday, the count of American dead in the Vietnam war totaled 8,560, with 49,922 wounded.

Many of the wounded suffered relatively minor injuries.

A Pentagon analysis between January 1965 and October 1966 showed that of 29,622 men who were wounded, 13,411 or just over 45 per cent returned to duty without requiring hospitalization.

Of the remaining 16,211, nearly three-fourths, 11,723, returned to duty, most in Vietnam, after recuperating a short time; 848 left service due to disability; 409 died; and the remaining 3,595 remained in the hospital, with doctors estimating that half would return to duty.

Curtis May Oppose Long

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, R-Mo., told a town meeting of his constitutents Thursday night he is considering opposing U.S. Sen. Edward V. Long, a Democrat, in the 1968 election.

Curtis said he has not sought the office of senator in the past because he wanted to be a student of government. He said the House of Representatives permitted this but the work load in the Senate would be too much to allow him to continue his studies.

"This time I won't close the door," Curtis said, "It's not just a rumor that I'm thinking of running for the Senate.

The Webster Groves congressman made the disclosure to about 150 persons attending his first town meeting of the year. The Curtis town meetings were designed to improve communication between his constitutents and himself.

Curtis said Missouri does not have a strong two-party system and "I'm dedicated to building such a system."

Two Springfield Banks Resume Saturday Hours

SPRINGFIELD AP -- Two of Springfield's six banks announced today they would go back to Saturday hours after 20 years of no business on the last day of the week.

American National and Empire State said they would stay open from 9 a.m. to noon during the summer months. Officials said the decision to open on Saturdays were based on expressions of the need for banking service by merchants and other customers.

The city's four other banks have not announced their plans.

TV Cameras Make Pounds Stand out

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Almost all television viewers are weight-watchers. Not their own, but performers' weights.

The camera is a cruel eye that not only picks up wrinkles and sagging necklines on aging women performers, but somehow adds about 15 pounds on the worst spots of every performer. With few exceptions, everybody in television is either on a diet or going on one the next day.

The fans notice. They eagerly tune in the first Jackie Gleason Show of the season to find if Gleason lost any pounds over the summer. They learned to tell the age of a "Perry Mason" episode by the steadily expanding girth of the star, Raymond Burr, over the seasons.

Bob Hope has had his skinny seasons and his plumper ones.

The ups and downs of Jack E. Leonard are easily noted on the assorted variety shows on which he appears.

But of all the stars, the one who had made the most dramatic reduction of all is Sid Caesar. In a recent appearance on the Dean Martin Show, his slim boyish build combined with a new hair-style actually made him hard to recognize.

Caesar has, in fact, lost 50 pounds over the past few months. He will be in CBS's "The Sid Caesar-Imogene Coca-Carl Reiner-Howard Morris" special next Wednesday night, a reunion of the team that made "Your Show of Shows" an early TV delight. They wanted to use the old title, but could not get permission from Max Liebman, producer of the old show, who owns it.

"I just decided one day that I had too much weight," said Caesar, "and I said that's it — I'll lose it. So I did."

"I just went on a high protein diet and I do a lot of exercises, like push ups," he continued. "That's all there is to it. The exercises are just as important as the diet."

Caesar, whose career has been concentrated recently more on night club appearances and film roles than on television, does not hanker particularly for a return to weekly television unless it could be a free wheeling variety hour.

Rust Buys Cape Paper

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Purchase of The Southeast Weekly Bulletin, a weekly newspaper with facilities at 421 Broadway, by Gary Rust from Mrs. Beulah Hart has been announced.

Rust will assume direction of the newspaper as its publisher April 1. Mrs. Hart, who has owned and operated the publication since the death of her husband, the late Wm. G. Hart, will serve as its editor.

Rust, associated with Rust and Martin in the firm's new home furnishings center on Kingshighway south and the store at 615 Broadway, said he will devote full time to the newspaper and to an advertising agency he is now in the process of organizing.

Mr. and Mrs. Hart acquired the newspaper in 1953, and its publication offices remained at the old location on South Spanish street until last summer when they moved to the present location.

Where There's Smoke, There's Risk Of Dying

(Second of four articles)

While the influence of cigarette smoking on lung cancer has made a tremendous impact on the public, it should not be forgotten that there is an even more extensive connection between smoking and heart disease.

One dramatic statistic underscores this point, the Missouri Heart Association notes. It is estimated that each year at least 60,00 American men die prematurely of coronary heart disease that has been accelerated by cigarette smoking. That is about equal to the number of deaths from a combination of lung cancer plus all other diseases which are statistically blamed on cigarettes.

The obvious point is that the middle - aged male -- and to a lesser extent, everyone else-- who smokes cigarettes ought to be worrying more about both his heart and his lungs.

Equally pointed are the latest statistics derived from a 4-year study of over one million ican Cancer Society:

For the first time, suggestive evidence linking cigarette smoking and strokes was shown. The stroke death rate was 40 per cent higher in men aged 55-64, who smoked cigarettes, as compared with nonsmokers. In this same disease category, the risk proved unexpectedly greatest for women. Female smokers in all age groups had up to twice the stroke death rate of nonsmoking women.

The same study also showed that women are not protected against the effects of tobacco. The overall death rate for women smokers aged 45-64 was considerably higher than for nonsmoking women.

Men smoking as few as 1-9 cigarettes a day had death rates substantially higher than those for men who had never smoked regularly.

Death rates were higher among those who started smoking young, highest among those who started before age 15.

The death rate of men who smoked cigarettes was more than twice that of men who had never smoked regularly. But-and from this statistic every cigarette smoker can take heart -- men who had stopped smoking ten years before enrollment in the study had the same average death rate as men who had never smoked.

Two More NBC Newscasters Stay on Air

NEW YORK (AP) - Two more well - known National Broadcasting Co., newscasters, Ray Scherer and Morgan Beatty, have joined Chet Huntley and Frank McGee in going on the air despite a strike by the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists.

But in Washington, State Department sources said Secretary of State Dean Rusk will not appear on NBC's international "Meet the Press" program Sunday if the strike by the 18,000-member union is still on against the major TV and radio networks.

Negotiators for the networks and the union have been summoned to Washington Saturday for talks in the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service offices in efforts to settle the walkout, now in its third day. Talks broke off Tuesday night, and the union struck NBC, CBS, ABC and the Mutual Broadcasting System Wednesday morning.

The strike is over wages and commercial fees. It was called in behalf of about 100 local on the air newsmen at network-owned stations in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. Their salaries exceed $11,000 a year. Most network stars, some of whose salaries range upward to the $100,000 level, supported the strike as members of AFTRA even though network newscasters had reached an agreement last January.

Programming continued with minimum of disruption Thursday. Reruns of comedies replaced soap operas. Most of the game and panel shows are taped and were not affected. When their backlog runs out, repeat shows will be presented.

Live entertainment programs, such as the Ed Sullivan Show on Sunday night, will not be presented unless the strike is settled. Repeats have been scheduled.

How America's red-white-and-blue collar workers help keep America strong.

In May 1941, top representatives of America's labor unions met with Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, and pledged their support of the Payroll Savings Plan for U.S. Savings Bonds.
Today, organized labor still endorses and actively supports the program. And the Payroll Savings Plan, just an experiment in 1941, now proudly boasts 8 million members, mostly union people, sharing a personal interest in their future and their country's.
With the Payroll Savings Plan, saving for the future is downright easy — and painless. How can you spend money you don't even see? When you sign up, a small part of your money is tucked away every payday. Automatically. And starts earning you interest of 4.15% on every Bond you buy and hold to maturity.
Bonds grow quickly. So when you need the money for important, personal things, the money is right there — ready to help pay for them.
Important things like a new home, education, that dream vacation — or your retirement.
Buy Bonds on the Payroll Savings Plan where you work and you'll find yourself in pretty good company. And dollars ahead.

A Londoner wound up a business trip to the Orient with a visit to Taipei. At a Chamber of Commerce luncheon he was asked to say a few words. Almost none of his audience could understand English, and he could not speak a word of Chinese. His address was, therefore, to be translated by an interpreter sentence by sentence.

"Well," he began, "I just want all you fellows to know that I'm tickled to death to be here."

A look of agony appeared on the interpreter's face. "This poor man," he said in halting Chinese, "scratches himself until he dies, only to be with you."

Kansas Pigs Lose Trip To Vietnam

DOWNS, Kan. (AP) — The priorities of war have rubbed out a trip to Vietnam for 108 hogs from north - central Kansas.

Instead, the animals will be sold at public auction Saturday and the proceeds will be sent to South Vietnam to buy pigs there and give them to needy farmers.

Reason for the change in plans is that the Pigs-for-Peace Committee has been notified that the Air Force can't furnish transportation for the hogs—that war demands have taken all priority on its planes.

The auction will be held at the farm of Dan Vander Giesen, committee chairman.

All of the animals have been vaccinated, blood-tested and cleared for international shipment. The 98 gilts will begin farrowing late in May.

Jim Finley, son of the former Downs minister who started the idea four months ago, said they represent approximately a $7,000 to $8,000 investment by the project.

"I would almost guess that more money will be raised by selling the pigs back," he said, "because the farmers probably will pay a pretty good price. Those pigs were picked as the best out of about 10 different herds of hogs and the owners had lowered the price for the project."

The bad thing about it, he said, "is that we won't have that personal, direct contact."

A four-man delegation was to have accompanied the animals to Vietnam and stayed there a month.

Funds were sent from all over north-central Kansas by individuals, churches, schools, civic clubs and other groups to pay for the hogs and for feed.

The animals were to have been received by Finley's father, the Rev. S. Ben Finley, who is working in Vietnam under the Agency for International Development. The minister wanted them to start a breeding station.

Under the plan, each Vietnamese farmer who receives pigs would pledge to return one from the first litter to extend the project.

Vander Giesen said the committee was disappointed but not discouraged by the change in plans because the new project will do much good, but with less meaning.

"We still have a great project, a great aim, and thousands of people know what we stand for and hope to accomplish," he said.

Many of the wounded suffered relatively minor injuries.

A Pentagon analysis between January 1965 and October 1966 showed that of 29,622 men who were wounded, 13,411 or just over 45 per cent returned to duty without requiring hospitalization.

Of the remaining 16,211, nearly three-fourths, 11,723, returned to duty, most in Vietnam, after recuperating a short time; 848 left service due to disability; 409 died; and the remaining 3,595 remained in the hospital, with doctors estimating that half would return to duty.

Curtis May Oppose Long

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Rep. Thomas B. Curtis, R-Mo., told a town meeting of his constitutents Thursday night he is considering opposing U.S. Sen. Edward V. Long, a Democrat, in the 1968 election.

Curtis said he has not sought the office of senator in the past because he wanted to be a student of government. He said the House of Representatives permitted this but the work load in the Senate would be too much to allow him to continue his studies.

"This time I won't close the door," Curtis said, "It's not just a rumor that I'm thinking of running for the Senate.

The Webster Groves congressman made the disclosure to about 150 persons attending his first town meeting of the year. The Curtis town meetings were designed to improve communication between his constitutents and himself.

Curtis said Missouri does not have a strong two-party system and "I'm dedicated to building such a system."

Two Springfield Banks Resume Saturday Hours

SPRINGFIELD AP -- Two of Springfield's six banks announced today they would go back to Saturday hours after 20 years of no business on the last day of the week.

American National and Empire State said they would stay open from 9 a.m. to noon during the summer months. Officials said the decision to open on Saturdays were based on expressions of the need for banking service by merchants and other customers.

The city's four other banks have not announced their plans.

TV Cameras Make Pounds Stand out

By CYNTHIA LOWRY
AP TV-Radio Writer

NEW YORK (AP) — Almost all television viewers are weight-watchers. Not their own, but performers' weights.

The camera is a cruel eye that not only picks up wrinkles and sagging necklines on aging women performers, but somehow adds about 15 pounds on the worst spots of every performer. With few exceptions, everybody in television is either on a diet or going on one the next day.

The fans notice. They eagerly tune in the first Jackie Gleason Show of the season to find if Gleason lost any pounds over the summer. They learned to tell the age of a "Perry Mason" episode by the steadily expanding girth of the star, Raymond Burr, over the seasons.

Bob Hope has had his skinny seasons and his plumper ones.

The ups and downs of Jack E. Leonard are easily noted on the assorted variety shows on which he appears.

But of all the stars, the one who had made the most dramatic reduction of all is Sid Caesar. In a recent appearance on the Dean Martin Show, his slim boyish build combined with a new hair-style actually made him hard to recognize.

Caesar has, in fact, lost 50 pounds over the past few months. He will be in CBS's "The Sid Caesar-Imogene Coca-Carl Reiner-Howard Morris" special next Wednesday night, a reunion of the team that made "Your Show of Shows" an early TV delight. They wanted to use the old title, but could not get permission from Max Liebman, producer of the old show, who owns it.

"I just decided one day that I had too much weight," said Caesar, "and I said that's it — I'll lose it. So I did."

"I just went on a high protein diet and I do a lot of exercises, like push ups," he continued. "That's all there is to it. The exercises are just as important as the diet."

Caesar, whose career has been concentrated recently more on night club appearances and film roles than on television, does not hanker particularly for a return to weekly television unless it could be a free wheeling variety hour.

Rust Buys Cape Paper

CAPE GIRARDEAU -- Purchase of The Southeast Weekly Bulletin, a weekly newspaper with facilities at 421 Broadway, by Gary Rust from Mrs. Beulah Hart has been announced.

Rust will assume direction of the newspaper as its publisher April 1. Mrs. Hart, who has owned and operated the publication since the death of her husband, the late Wm. G. Hart, will serve as its editor.

Rust, associated with Rust and Martin in the firm's new home furnishings center on Kingshighway south and the store at 615 Broadway, said he will devote full time to the newspaper and to an advertising agency he is now in the process of organizing.

Mr. and Mrs. Hart acquired the newspaper in 1953, and its publication offices remained at the old location on South Spanish street until last summer when they moved to the present location.

Where There's Smoke, There's Risk Of Dying

(Second of four articles)

While the influence of cigarette smoking on lung cancer has made a tremendous impact on the public, it should not be forgotten that there is an even more extensive connection between smoking and heart disease.

One dramatic statistic underscores this point, the Missouri Heart Association notes. It is estimated that each year at least 60,00 American men die prematurely of coronary heart disease that has been accelerated by cigarette smoking. That is about equal to the number of deaths from a combination of lung cancer plus all other diseases which are statistically blamed on cigarettes.

The obvious point is that the middle - aged male -- and to a lesser extent, everyone else -- who smokes cigarettes ought to be worrying more about both his heart and his lungs.

Equally pointed are the latest statistics derived from a 4-year study of over one million ican Cancer Society:

For the first time, suggestive evidence linking cigarette smoking and strokes was shown. The stroke death rate was 40 per cent higher in men aged 55-64, who smoked cigarettes, as compared with nonsmokers. In this same disease category, the risk proved unexpectedly greatest for women. Female smokers in all age groups had up to twice the stroke death rate of nonsmoking women.

The same study also showed that women are not protected against the effects of tobacco. The overall death rate for women smokers aged 45-64 was considerably higher than for nonsmoking women.

Men smoking as few as 1-9 cigarettes a day had death rates substantially higher than those for men who had never smoked regularly.

Death rates were higher among those who started smoking young, highest among those who started before age 15.

The death rate of men who smoked cigarettes was more than twice that of men who had never smoked regularly. But and from this statistic every cigarette smoker can take heart -- men who had stopped smoking ten years before enrollment in the study had the same average death rate as men who had never smoked.

Two More NBC Newscasters Stay on Air

NEW YORK (AP) - Two more well - known National Broadcasting Co., newscasters, Ray Scherer and Morgan Beatty, have joined Chet Huntley and Frank McGee in going on the air despite a strike by the American Federation of Television and Radio Artists.

But in Washington, State Department sources said Secretary of State Dean Rusk will not appear on NBC's international "Meet the Press" program Sunday if the strike by the 18,000-member union is still on against the major TV and radio networks.

Negotiators for the networks and the union have been summoned to Washington Saturday for talks in the Federal Mediation and Conciliation Service offices in efforts to settle the walkout, now in its third day. Talks broke off Tuesday night, and the union struck NBC, CBS, ABC and the Mutual Broadcasting System Wednesday morning.

The strike is over wages and commercial fees. It was called in behalf of about 100 local on the air newsmen at network-owned stations in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles. Their salaries exceed $11,000 a year. Most network stars, some of whose salaries range upward to the $100,000 level, supported the strike as members of AFTRA even though network newscasters had reached an agreement last January.

Programming continued with minimum of disruption Thursday. Reruns of comedies replaced soap operas. Most of the game and panel shows are taped and were not affected. When their backlog runs out, repeat shows will be presented.

Live entertainment programs, such as the Ed Sullivan Show on Sunday night, will not be presented unless the strike is settled. Repeats have been scheduled.

How America's red-white-and-blue collar workers help keep America strong.

In May 1941, top representatives of America's labor unions met with Henry Morgenthau, Jr., Secretary of the Treasury, and pledged their support of the Payroll Savings Plan for U.S. Savings Bonds.
Today, organized labor still endorses and actively supports the program. And the Payroll Savings Plan, just an experiment in 1941, now proudly boasts 8 million members, mostly union people, sharing a personal interest in their future and their country's.
With the Payroll Savings Plan, saving for the future is downright easy — and painless. How can you spend money you don't even see? When you sign up, a small part of your money is tucked away every payday. Automatically. And starts earning you interest of 4.15% on every Bond you buy and hold to maturity. Bonds grow quickly. So when you need the money for important, personal things, the money is right there — ready to help pay for them.
Important things like a new home, education, that dream vacation — or your retirement.
Buy Bonds on the Payroll Savings Plan where you work and you'll find yourself in pretty good company. And dollars ahead.

A Londoner wound up a business trip to the Orient with a visit to Taipei. At a Chamber of Commerce luncheon he was asked to say a few words. Almost none of his audience could understand English, and he could not speak a word of Chinese. His address was, therefore, to be translated by an interpreter sentence by sentence.

"Well," he began, "I just want all you fellows to know that I'm tickled to death to be here."

A look of agony appeared on the interpreter's face. "This poor man," he said in halting Chinese, "scratches himself until he dies, only to be with you."

Kansas Pigs Lose Trip To Vietnam

DOWNS, Kan. (AP) — The priorities of war have rubbed out a trip to Vietnam for 108 hogs from north - central Kansas.

Instead, the animals will be sold at public auction Saturday and the proceeds will be sent to South Vietnam to buy pigs there and give them to needy farmers.

Reason for the change in plans is that the Pigs-for-Peace Committee has been notified that the Air Force can't furnish transportation for the hogs — that war demands have taken all priority on its planes.

The auction will be held at the farm of Dan Vander Giesen, committee chairman.

All of the animals have been vaccinated, blood-tested and cleared for international shipment. The 98 gilts will begin farrowing late in May.

Jim Finley, son of the former Downs minister who started the idea four months ago, said they represent approximately a $7,000 to $8,000 investment by the project.

"I would almost guess that more money will be raised by selling the pigs back," he said, "because the farmers probably will pay a pretty good price. Those pigs were picked as the best out of about 10 different herds of hogs and the owners had lowered the price for the project."

The bad thing about it, he said, "is that we won't have that personal, direct contact."

A four-man delegation was to have accompanied the animals to Vietnam and stayed there a month.

Funds were sent from all over north-central Kansas by individuals, churches, schools, civic clubs and other groups to pay for the hogs and for feed.

The animals were to have been received by Finley's father, the Rev. S. Ben Finley, who is working in Vietnam under the Agency for International Development. The minister wanted them to start a breeding station.

Under the plan, each Vietnamese farmer who receives pigs would pledge to return one from the first litter to extend the project.

Vander Giesen said the committee was disappointed but not discouraged by the change in plans because the new project will do much good, but with less meaning.

"We still have a great project, a great aim, and thousands of people know what we stand for and hope to accomplish," he said.

I have tried to perform my duties as Councilman, to the best of my ability and I thank all who have given me the privilege of serving them for the past three years. With your vote, I hope to continue and to perform my duties acceptably to those whom I want to serve for the next three years.

NEW DELHI, INDIA (AP) - If you have a world map that shows only seven continents, you may want to order a new edition.

An eminent Indian geologist, and some of his colleagues in other nations, believe Africa is slowly - but ever so slowly - breaking up into two continents.

However, if you own any real estate there, don't be alarmed. Prof. F. A. Ahmad estimates the split won't take place for at least several million years.

"The process is already going on, with valleys in the north-eastern region getting wider," Ahmad said in an interview. "The next step will be for seas to be formed in them, like the Red Sea between Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

"Finally will come the actual division of the continent, with the eastern part moving toward the Indian Ocean and the western part going out into the Atlantic."

Actually, the division is unlikely to occur right down the middle of Africa. Instead, Ahmad visualizes the eastern portion being comprised of an area that includes Ethiopia, Kenya and Tanzania.

He said the formation of two Africas would represent a further advancement of a geological theory which maintains there used to be a supercontinent known as Gondwanaland, consisting of Africa, India, Australia, Antarctica and South America.

Ahmad, a professor at Aligarh Muslim University 100 miles southeast of New Delhi, presented a paper on this theory to a recent international symposium on the Indian Ocean.

About 170 million years ago, he believes, a major rupture occurred in Gondwanaland when a huge chunk of land broke away from the east coast of Africa.

During the next 130 million years that piece of real estate was subdivided two more times, this theory maintains. First Australia and Antarctica separated from what is now India. Then Antarctica parted from Australia.

Sometime during this period South America is believed to have broken away from western Africa. Even today their matching coastal lines indicate the two continents were once united.

What makes continents go their own ways? A common explanation, Ahmad said, is that the earth itself has expansionistic tendencies that cause ruptures in land masses and a swelling of currents in the sea.

"Obviously, a force capable of moving the continents must have existed inside the earth and there appears to be NO reason to believe that such a force, if it existed in the past, has ceased to exist now," Ahmad said in his paper.

However, there is NO cause for undue concern. Geologists don't anticipate any major changes in the foreseeable future. And by the time Africa has its rupture, engineers probably will have mastered the art of building bridges across oceans.

The Cunningham was in company with the radar picket destroyer Duncan when she was fired on, operating to stem the flow of arms and supplies into South Vietnam aboard enemy craft. The two destroyers quickly put down the enemy fire from shore batteries, and reported no casualties or damage.

Home based in Long Beach, Calif., the Cunningham has just completed her fourth month of an extended Western Pacific deployment.

CHARLESTON, S.C. -- A U.S. Air Force airframe repairman from Benton, Mo., is a member of an airlift wing cited for setting an unofficial world's record for low-altitude airdrops by C-141 Lockheed Starlifter aircraft.

Airman Third Class Danny K. Bollinger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bollinger Jr. of Benton, supported the 437th Military Airlift Wing at Charleston AFB, S.C., in its recent test airdrop of 34 tons of cargo.

The payload, a string of 28 loaded pallets connected by cables, was paradropped from a 500-foot altitude at 160 miles per hour. The cargo hit a 120-foot square bullseye on the Starlifter's initial flight over the target zone.

Wing members conducted the test--part of a demonstration for a Military Airlift Command (MAC) headquarters inspection team -- to prove the vast potential of the huge new C-141. The test, combined with other capabilities demonstrated by the airman's unit, brought the wing a successful rating from MAC headquarters observers.

Airman Bollinger's wing was the first unit on the East Coast to fly the C-141 on operational missions.

He attended Kelly High School.

BLYTHEVILLE AIR FORCE BASE, Ark. -- Best in Strategic Air Command honors were won recently by the 97th Airborne Missile Maintenance Squadron of Blytheville Air Force Base, Ark., for the second consecutive year.

Captain Robert M. Saxton, commander, 97th AMMS, received a message recently notifying him and the squadron of the selection made by Headquarters SAC.

In winning the award for the second time the local commander believes the 97th AMMS the first to win the award two consecutive years.

"I am almost certain that ours is the only squadron in SAC to win this particular award two straight years," said Captain Saxton.

The squadron was judged on its overall performance of its mission including job performance, appearance of the facility, effective supervision and management.

According to Captain Saxton, the biggest factor in winning the award was the quality of work performed by the airmen.

"The airmen in the squadron do anything they are called upon to do, with determination and a positive attitude. We are under-manned now and for them (the airmen) to perform this well, truly separates them from the ordinary."

Captain Saxton also complimented the squadron's supervisors for their contributions in winning the award.

"The noncommissioned officers' area of responsibilities, management and supervision, provided the 'tie-breaker.'

The two-hour inspection by higher headquarters proved that the squadron's supervisors did their jobs most effectively during the year."

No official date has yet been established for the trophy presentation. It is expected to be made in the near future.

One Third of Navy men Involved in Vietnam are Support Personnel Pearl Harbor -- In less than three years, the number of U. S. military personnel in the Republic of Vietnam has increased from 10,000 to more than 400,000. This buildup places heavy logistics demands on the Navy.

According to the Commander in Chief, Pacific Fleet, more than 15,000 of the 25,000 Navy men who serve ashore in Vietnam are support personnel. This is nearly one-third of the 55,000 personnel who are directly involved in the Vietnam war on any given day.

The 15,000 Navy support personnel ashore are members of the Service Force, Pacific Fleet, the Navy's logistical command in the Pacific. They provide a wide variety of services along the coast of Vietnam, from the Demilitarized Zone in the north to An Thoi in the Gulf of Siam in the south.

Naval Support Activity Da Nang has 7700 personnel, whose job it is to conduct logistic operations at ports and beaches in support of all free world forces in the I Corps tactical zone. In addition to the main base at DaNang there are smaller naval support facilities at Chu Lai, Hue and Dong Ha. Dong Ha is only 4 1/2 miles from the DMZ.

Twelve hundred men are attached to the Naval Support Activity, Saigon. Unlike the activity at Da Nang, the Saigon activity supports only the Navy; the Army's Ist Logistical Command supplies all other forces in the area. Naval Support Activity, Saigon, has 10 base detachments at vital coastal points and up inland waterways. These detachments provide supplies, repairs and other services to Game Warden (river assault) and Market Time (coastal surveillance) forces.

NEW DELHI, INDIA (AP) - If you have a world map that shows only seven continents, you may want to order a new edition.

An eminent Indian geologist, and some of his colleagues in other nations, believe Africa is slowly - but ever so slowly - breaking up into two continents.

However, if you own any real estate there, don't be alarmed. Prof. F. A. Ahmad estimates the split won't take place for at least several million years.

"The process is already going on, with valleys in the north-eastern region getting wider," Ahmad said in an interview. "The next step will be for seas to be formed in them, like the Red Sea between Egypt and Saudi Arabia.

"Finally will come the actual division of the continent, with the eastern part moving toward the Indian Ocean and the western part going out into the Atlantic."

Actually, the division is unlikely to occur right down the middle of Africa. Instead, Ahmad visualizes the eastern portion being comprised of an area that includes Ethiopia, Kenya and Tanzania.

He said the formation of two Africas would represent a further advancement of a geological theory which maintains there used to be a supercontinent known as Gondwanaland, consisting of Africa, India, Australia, Antarctica and South America.

Ahmad, a professor at Aligarh Muslim University 100 miles southeast of New Delhi, presented a paper on this theory to a recent international symposium on the Indian Ocean.

About 170 million years ago, he believes, a major rupture occurred in Gondwanaland when a huge chunk of land broke away from the east coast of Africa.

During the next 130 million years that piece of real estate was subdivided two more times, this theory maintains. First Australia and Antarctica separated from what is now India. Then Antarctica parted from Australia.

Sometime during this period South America is believed to have broken away from western Africa. Even today their matching coastal lines indicate the two continents were once united.

What makes continents go their own ways? A common explanation, Ahmad says, is that the earth itself has expansionistic tendencies that cause ruptures in land masses and a swelling of currents in the sea.

"Obviously, a force capable of moving the continents must have existed inside the earth and there appears to be NO reason to believe that such a force, if it existed in the past, has ceased to exist now," Ahmad said in his paper.

However, there is NO cause for undue concern. Geologists don't anticipate any major changes in the foreseeable future. And by the time Africa has its rupture, engineers probably will have mastered the art of building bridges across oceans.

He was training in leadership, tactics of small infantry units, and use of infantry weapons. He also received instruction in map and aerial photograph reading, guerrilla warfare, and counterinsurgency operations.

A member of Pi Kappa Alpha fraternity, he attended Southeast Missouri State College, Cape Girardeau, Mo.

His wife, Mary, lives at 803 S. Berry Road, St. Louis.

(D0755) USS ALFRED A. CUNNINGHAM (DD-752) (FHTNC) -- Sonar Technician William L. Voss, USN, son of Mrs. Hobert Voss of 811 E S Main St., Dexter, Mo., participated in a ship-to-shore gunfire battle off the coast of North Vietnam, as a crewmember of the U. S. Seventh Fleet destroyer Alfred A. Cunningham.

The Cunningham was in company with the radar picket destroyer Duncan when she was fired on, operating to stem the flow of arms and supplies into South Vietnam aboard enemy craft. The two destroyers quickly put down the enemy fire from shore batteries, and reported no casualties or damage.

Home based in Long Beach, Calif., the Cunningham has just completed her fourth month of an extended Western Pacific deployment.

CHARLESTON, S.C. -- A U.S. Air Force airframe repairman from Benton, Mo., is a member of an airlift wing cited for setting an unofficial world's record for low-altitude airdrops by C-141 Lockheed Starlifter aircraft.

Airman Third Class Danny K. Bollinger, son of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Bollinger Jr. of Benton, supported the 437th Military Airlift Wing at Charleston AFB, S.C., in its recent test airdrop of 34 tons of cargo.

The payload, a string of 28 loaded pallets connected by cables, was paradropped from a 500-foot altitude at 160 miles per hour. The cargo hit a 120-foot square bullseye on the Starlifter's initial flight over the target zone.

Wing members conducted the test--part of a demonstration for a Military Airlift Command (MAC) headquarters inspection team -- to prove the vast potential of the huge new C-141. The test, combined with other capabilities demonstrated by the airman's unit, brought the wing a successful rating from MAC headquarters observers.

Airman Bollinger's wing was the first unit on the East Coast to fly the C-141 on operational missions.

He attended Kelly High School.

BLYTHEVILLE AIR FORCE BASE, Ark. -- Best in Strategic Air Command honors were won recently by the 97th Airborne Missile Maintenance Squadron of Blytheville Air Force Base, Ark., for the second consecutive year.

Captain Robert M. Saxton, commander, 97th AMMS, received a message recently notifying him and the squadron of the selection made by Headquarters SAC.

In winning the award for the second time the local commander believes the 97th AMMS the first to win the award two consecutive years.

"I am almost certain that ours is the only squadron in SAC to win this particular award two straight years," said Captain Saxton.

The squadron was judged on its overall performance of its mission including job performance, appearance of the facility, effective supervision and management.

According to Captain Saxton, the biggest factor in winning the award was the quality of work performed by the airmen.

"The airmen in the squadron do anything they are called upon to do, with determination and a positive attitude. We are under-manned now and for them (the airmen) to perform this well, truly separates them from the ordinary."

Captain Saxton also complimented the squadron's supervisors for their contributions in winning the award.

"The noncommissioned officers' area of responsibilities, management and supervision, provided the 'tie-breaker.'

The two-hour inspection by higher headquarters proved that the squadron's supervisors did their jobs most effectively during the year."

No official date has yet been established for the trophy presentation. It is expected to be made in the near future.

One Third of Navy men Involved in Vietnam are Support Personnel Pearl Harbor -- In less than three years, the number of U. S. military personnel in the Republic of Vietnam has increased from 10,000 to more than 400,000. This buildup places heavy logistics demands on the Navy.

According to the Commander in Chief, Pacific Fleet, more than 15,000 of the 25,000 Navy men who serve ashore in Vietnam are support personnel. This is nearly one-third of the 55,000 personnel who are directly involved in the Vietnam war on any given day.

The 15,000 Navy support personnel ashore are members of the Service Force, Pacific Fleet, the Navy's logistical command in the Pacific. They provide a wide variety of services along the coast of Vietnam, from the Demilitarized Zone in the north to An Thoi in the Gulf of Siam in the south.

Naval Support Activity Da Nang has 7700 personnel, whose job it is to conduct logistic operations at ports and beaches in support of all free world forces in the I Corps tactical zone. In addition to the main base at DaNang there are smaller naval support facilities at Chu Lai, Hue and Dong Ha. Dong Ha is only 4 1/2 miles from the DMZ.

Twelve hundred men are attached to the Naval Support Activity, Saigon. Unlike the activity at Da Nang, the Saigon activity supports only the Navy; the Army's Ist Logistical Command supplies all other forces in the area. Naval Support Activity, Saigon, has 10 base detachments at vital coastal points and up inland waterways. These detachments provide supplies, repairs and other services to Game Warden (river assault) and Market Time (coastal surveillance) forces.

Southwest Missouri Farmer's Irrigation Ingenuity Pays off

CARTHAGE, Mo.(AP)—Since Joseph's time, the Nile River has flooded each year to provide water and rich silt for the production of Egypt's food. In southwest Missouri, Eugene M. Poirot uses the Biblical technique to grow bumper crops on land that a generation ago brought a scant living to farmers.

The 68-year-old Poirot's Nile is Coon Creek, a sluggish little stream meandering through the rolling farm country. But in winter and early spring it can turn into a swollen, gushing torrent. This is when Poirot captures part of the excess water in ponds to use later when rains fail and the broiling sun threatens to shrivel the crops.

"This land has come through the whole sequence of poverty, farming, drought, depression, everything," Poirot said. "We're doing a good job of farming now by returning the plant food to the soil and supplying water."

In 1966, southwest Missouri was a drought-disaster area. Only 23 inches of rain fell, compared to the normal of 48. By pumping excess creek water into an 11-acre pond, Poirot irrigated 270 acres. His corn yielded 125 bushels an acre, and a field of green beans netted him $85 an acre.

"That isn't disaster," Poirot grinned.

Most irrigation in the United States involves drawing of water from deep wells or directly from amply supplied streams at an initial cost of from $20,000 to $30,000. Neither system is feasible in southwest Missouri. Poirot believes he has developed a cheap, simple method of turning poor land and deficient rainfall into riches for his community. It could be the key to industrial development as well.

About a year ago Poirot and area business leaders formed Ozark Agricultural and Industrial Development Corporation. Assisted by Midwest Research Institute of Kansas City, the group prepared a report showing some of the potentials for irrigation, production and development of industry. The proposed development area includes 2.1 million acres and extends into portions of Kansas and Oklahoma. The group is seeking a federal technical assistance grant of $50,000 to conduct a comprehensive survey which would be used to start specific development projects.

"If we can develop irrigation by using water usually wasted in runoffs," Poirot said, "we can have more additional income in a year than one of the dams would cost."

Poirot's total investment for irrigating up to 300 acres is $6,000.

"This has to be so cheap the guy without money can do it," Poirot said. "The rich guy doesn't need it."

Poirot's ponds are simply holes scooped out of the earth by bulldozers. The dams are earthen and lack the fancy and expensive concrete fixtures usually displayed. Water is pumped from Coon Creek at the rate of 2,500 gallons a minute by an old mine pump which cost $270. It is powered by a battered tractor operating a belt-driven pulley. The water is forced uphill through a large steel pipe into the pond.

When Poirot is ready to irrigate he opens a large valve and the water rushes through a system of cheap plastic pipes into the fields.

Robert Dale, publisher of the Carthage Press, is president of the development group and is a dedicated Poirot fan.

"We've been getting good support from our congressmen —both in Missouri and Kansas —and so far we haven't run into any snags," Dale said.

Area industry, Dale and Poirot claim, will develop as irrigation produces specialized crops such as beans, strawberries and other high-value commodities.

"When we open up production we can supply raw materials for processing plants of all kinds," Poirot said. "We ship our stuff out now to other areas. Why not do it all here at home?"

Poirot, a graduate of the University of Illinois, has been farming the "hard pan" of southwest Missouri since the 1920s. His parents came from Alsace-Lorraine in 1954, and his gestures, passion and belief in agriculture speak of his heritage.

Poirot has turned land that sold for $10 an acre 45 years ago into property that today is almost priceless, but in any case he doesn't want to sell.

Farmers —particularly those with extremely low incomes — can be helped by low-cost irrigation. Poirot said they would be able to quit their jobs in town and return full-time to the business of farming. But, they will have to be educated about irrigation and how it can be done with a minimum of investment.

"It'll go slow at first," Poirot said, "but we can move ahead 20 years in the next five."

On Feb. 20 he told a national farm policy conference in Washington, D. C.:

"The problem (agriculture) is more than simple economics, because human bodies, not crops, are the final products of farming."

WHAT WOULD WE DO

If in the life we had not the one called Christ? To walk beside us, and take our hands when the road is rough and we stumble on the way?

If we could not feel the warmth of his love when looking off into the sun-filled day and know that as the earth comes to life again, the same we will do after we have passed from this life into the next. What would we do if we had not the hope of an eternal life -- if we knew we would not see the ones we love ever again when they are departed and we gaze at them for the last time before they are put away into the earth? If we could feel no compassion for those less fortunate than we, that are sick and maimed and in despair?

If we could not see the beauty in the bloom of a flower, the green of the earth, or the eyes of a child?

Why would we strive or work in this world if not to prepare a far better one to go to after we have past the veil of darkness to step thru the turmoil of one city to one of peace and love and joy ever after?

What would we do, if when our hearts are filled with doubts and fears and heavy with burdens, we could not go to our own private place and commune with our Father until the light touch of his hand will lighten the weight, put a song in our heart and a smile on our lips?

Leaving us with more faith than ever that the world and the things there of belong to Him, and Him alone. We have them for awhile to use.

Leaves us knowing that he will take care of us, if we will let him. He truly knows our needs, our hearts.

Leaves us knowing how truly unworthy we are. How we fail him from one day to the other and makes our hearts ache that we can't seem to do more.

Leaves us not understanding why some say that God is dead.

Leaves us not believing that he who says it really believes it himself as long as he can take a deep breath and feel the very soul of our own being separated from the body which houses it.

Makes us want to tell the whole world what wonderful peace you can feel by knowing that as long as there is life on this earth, as long as the stars are in Heaven and there is time -- Our God is not Dead -- not now or ever!

IN MEDICAL aidman training, one of our classes consisted of giving first aid to a fellow classmate on a live-fire infiltration course. When the time came for the medic in front of me to crawl down that long 50-meter trail to give first aid to his "patient," he froze at the starting point. The patient gave out a ghastly cry of simulated pain and yelled, "Medic!"

Came the reply from the starting point: "I don't make house calls!"

Southwest Missouri Farmer's Irrigation Ingenuity Pays off

CARTHAGE, Mo.(AP)—Since Joseph's time, the Nile River has flooded each year to provide water and rich silt for the production of Egypt's food. In southwest Missouri, Eugene M. Poirot uses the Biblical technique to grow bumper crops on land that a generation ago brought a scant living to farmers.

The 68-year-old Poirot's Nile is Coon Creek, a sluggish little stream meandering through the rolling farm country. But in winter and early spring it can turn into a swollen, gushing torrent. This is when Poirot captures part of the excess water in ponds to use later when rains fail and the broiling sun threatens to shrivel the crops.

"This land has come through the whole sequence of poverty, farming, drought, depression, everything," Poirot said. "We're doing a good job of farming now by returning the plant food to the soil and supplying water."

In 1966, southwest Missouri was a drought-disaster area. Only 23 inches of rain fell, compared to the normal of 48. By pumping excess creek water into an 11-acre pond, Poirot irrigated 270 acres. His corn yielded 125 bushels an acre, and a field of green beans netted him $85 an acre.

"That isn't disaster," Poirot grinned.

Most irrigation in the United States involves drawing of water from deep wells or directly from amply supplied streams at an initial cost of from $20,000 to $30,000. Neither system is feasible in southwest Missouri. Poirot believes he has developed a cheap, simple method of turning poor land and deficient rainfall into riches for his community. It could be the key to industrial development as well.

About a year ago Poirot and area business leaders formed Ozark Agricultural and Industrial Development Corporation. Assisted by Midwest Research Institute of Kansas City, the group prepared a report showing some of the potentials for irrigation, production and development of industry. The proposed development area includes 2.1 million acres and extends into portions of Kansas and Oklahoma. The group is seeking a federal technical assistance grant of $50,000 to conduct a comprehensive survey which would be used to start specific development projects.

"If we can develop irrigation by using water usually wasted in runoffs," Poirot said, "we can have more additional income in a year than one of the dams would cost."

Poirot's total investment for irrigating up to 300 acres is $6,000.

"This has to be so cheap the guy without money can do it," Poirot said. "The rich guy doesn't need it."

Poirot's ponds are simply holes scooped out of the earth by bulldozers. The dams are earthen and lack the fancy and expensive concrete fixtures usually displayed. Water is pumped from Coon Creek at the rate of 2,500 gallons a minute by an old mine pump which cost $270. It is powered by a battered tractor operating a belt-driven pulley. The water is forced uphill through a large steel pipe into the pond.

When Poirot is ready to irrigate he opens a large valve and the water rushes through a system of cheap plastic pipes into the fields.

Robert Dale, publisher of the Carthage Press, is president of the development group and is a dedicated Poirot fan.

"We've been getting good support from our congressmen —both in Missouri and Kansas —and so far we haven't run into any snags," Dale said.

Area industry, Dale and Poirot claim, will develop as irrigation produces specialized crops such as beans, strawberries and other high-value commodities.

"When we open up production we can supply raw materials for processing plants of all kinds," Poirot said. "We ship our stuff out now to other areas. Why not do it all here at home?"

Poirot, a graduate of the University of Illinois, has been farming the "hard pan" of southwest Missouri since the 1920s. His parents came from Alsace-Lorraine in 1954, and his gestures, passion and belief in agriculture speak of his heritage.

Poirot has turned land that sold for $10 an acre 45 years ago into property that today is almost priceless, but in any case he doesn't want to sell.

Farmers —particularly those with extremely low incomes — can be helped by low-cost irrigation. Poirot said they would be able to quit their jobs in town and return full-time to the business of farming. But, they will have to be educated about irrigation and how it can be done with a minimum of investment.

"It'll go slow at first," Poirot said, "but we can move ahead 20 years in the next five."

On Feb. 20 he told a national farm policy conference in Washington, D. C.:

"The problem (agriculture) is more than simple economics, because human bodies, not crops, are the final products of farming."

WHAT WOULD WE DO

If in the life we had not the one called Christ? To walk beside us, and take our hands when the road is rough and we stumble on the way?

If we could not feel the warmth of his love when looking off into the sun-filled day and know that as the earth comes to life again, the same we will do after we have passed from this life into the next. What would we do if we had not the hope of an eternal life -- if we knew we would not see the ones we love ever again when they are departed and we gaze at them for the last time before they are put away into the earth? If we could feel no compassion for those less fortunate than we, that are sick and maimed and in despair?

If we could not see the beauty in the bloom of a flower, the green of the earth, or the eyes of a child?

Why would we strive or work in this world if not to prepare a far better one to go to after we have past the veil of darkness to step thru the turmoil of one city to one of peace and love and joy ever after?

What would we do, if when our hearts are filled with doubts and fears and heavy with burdens, we could not go to our own private place and commune with our Father until the light touch of his hand will lighten the weight, put a song in our heart and a smile on our lips?

Leaving us with more faith than ever that the world and the things there of belong to Him, and Him alone. We have them for awhile to use.

Leaves us knowing that he will take care of us, if we will let him. He truly knows our needs, our hearts.

Leaves us knowing how truly unworthy we are. How we fail him from one day to the other and makes our hearts ache that we can't seem to do more. Leaves us not understanding why some say that God is dead.

Leaves us not believing that he who says it really believes it himself as long as he can take a deep breath and feel the very soul of our own being separated from the body which houses it.

Makes us want to tell the whole world what wonderful peace you can feel by knowing that as long as there is life on this earth, as long as the stars are in Heaven and there is time -- Our God is not Dead -- not now or ever!

IN MEDICAL-aidman training, one of our classes consisted of giving first aid to a fellow classmate on a live-fire infiltration course. When the time came for the medic in front of me to crawl down that long 50-meter trail to give first aid to his "patient," he froze at the starting point. The patient gave out a ghastly cry of simulated pain and yelled, "Medic!"

Came the reply from the starting point: "I don't make house calls!"

History reveals that "Help Wanted" notices were among the very first advertisements ever to appear in newspapers. The first newspapers carried no advertising, and these notices from employers were the start of newspaper advertising as we know it today.

Wherever newspapers are printed, the Employment pages in the Want Ads are the most important job market, where employers and employees meet, to the mutual benefit of both.

Letters to the Editor

March 28, 1967

The Daily Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri

To the Editor:

If everyone would study the methods and tactics used by the Bolsheviks in conquering a country, they would soon learn what the war in Vietnam is all about and why Rhodesia is next in line.

The record of the U. S. Senate investigation regarding the Katyn Forest massacre is a good example of the Bolshevik tactics of insuring leadership. It will be recalled that right after WWII the Bolsheviks killed practically all the Christian Polish Army Officers and threw them in a huge pile in the Katyn Forest. Public pressure forced a group of U. S. Senators to visit the scene. In using this method of elimination there was no possibility of those brave Polish Officers ever becoming leaders and overthrowing the Bolshevik's strangehold on the Polish people.

The "socalled" Vietnam war is a similar measure, as it destroys the healthy Christian boys by casualties and disease thus leaving the weaklings and imbeciles at home to breed.

The next phony war will be in Rhodesia where Christians will kill Christians while the Bolsheviks sit back and laugh as they direct the war operations from the "U.N. Security Council." Will the people ever wake up?

Cordially yours,
Robert C. Schwab

OF NOBLE ORIGIN

A youngster came home from school and told his mother the teacher had asked him where he had been born. "You know the answer to that," his mother replied easily, "I was in St. Mary's hospital."

"I know," confessed the youngster. "But I didn't want to sound like a sissy, so I said I was born in Yankee Stadium."

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

Dr. Kazutaka Watanabe is a third generation Christian in Japan. His grandfather, a Samawai warrior was so moved when he heard Christian pipe-organ music that he became a convert. Dr. Watanabe's father was a Baptist minister for 54 years.

Educated at the Japan University, at Colgate, Oxford and the University of Berlin, Dr. Watanabe has taught college all his life. He is also cultural advisor to Headquarters U.S. Forces and to the Fifth Air Force in Japan.

Besides being a Christian, Dr. Watanabe understands and accepts the faith of his ancestors, Buddhism. To us of the western world this may be hard to understand. But to the Japanese and Dr. Watanabe it is a natural approach. "I have two souls and I have no conflict," he says. His articles and talks show sympathy and understanding for both great faiths. He points out: "there are 50,970,000 Buddhist in Japan and 641,000 Christians," yet "in 1961, 2,750,000 copies of the Bible were sold in Japan. Since the end of the war about 30,000,000 copies have been sold and a great number of free copies have been distributed."

Letters to the Editor

The Daily Sikeston Standard
Sikeston, Missouri

To the Editor:

If everyone would study the methods and tactics used by the Bolsheviks in conquering a country, they would soon learn what the war in Vietnam is all about and why Rhodesia is next in line.

The record of the U. S. Senate investigation regarding the Katyn Forest massacre is a good example of the Bolshevik tactics of insuring leadership. It will be recalled that right after WWII the Bolsheviks killed practically all the Christian Polish Army Officers and threw them in a huge pile in the Katyn Forest. Public pressure forced a group of U. S. Senators to visit the scene. In using this method of elimination there was no possibility of those brave Polish Officers ever becoming leaders and overthrowing the Bolshevik's strangehold on the Polish people.

The "socalled" Vietnam war is a similar measure, as it destroys the healthy Christian boys by casualties and disease thus leaving the weaklings and imbeciles at home to breed.

The next phony war will be in Rhodesia where Christians will kill Christians while the Bolsheviks sit back and laugh as they direct the war operations from the "U.N. Security Council." Will the people ever wake up?

Cordially yours,
Robert C. Schwab

OF NOBLE ORIGIN

A youngster came home from school and told his mother the teacher had asked him where he had been born. "You know the answer to that," his mother replied easily, "I was in St. Mary's hospital."

"I know," confessed the youngster. "But I didn't want to sound like a sissy, so I said I was born in Yankee Stadium."

The POWER of FAITH

By WOODI ISHMAEL

Dr. Kazutaka Watanabe is a third generation Christian in Japan. His grandfather, a Samawai warrior was so moved when he heard Christian pipe-organ music that he became a convert. Dr. Watanabe's father was a Baptist minister for 54 years.

Educated at the Japan University, at Colgate, Oxford and the University of Berlin, Dr. Watanabe has taught college all his life. He is also cultural advisor to Headquarters U.S. Forces and to the Fifth Air Force in Japan.

Besides being a Christian, Dr. Watanabe understands and accepts the faith of his ancestors, Buddhism. To us of the western world this may be hard to understand. But to the Japanese and Dr. Watanabe it is a natural approach. "I have two souls and I have no conflict," he says. His articles and talks show sympathy and understanding for both great faiths. He points out: "there are 50,970,000 Buddhist in Japan and 641,000 Christians," yet "in 1961, 2,750,000 copies of the Bible were sold in Japan. Since the end of the war about 30,000,000 copies have been sold and a great number of free copies have been distributed."

Today in History
By THE ASSOCIATED PRESS

Today is Friday, March 31, the 90th day of 1967. There are 275 days left in the year.

Today's highlight in history:

On this date in 1933, the Civilian Conservation Corps was created by an act of Congress to provide employment for men between 17 and 23 years of age.

On this date:

In 1889, Paris celebrated the completion of the Eiffel Tower.

In 1917, the United States took formal possession of the Virgin Islands after their purchase from Denmark.

In 1939, Great Britain and France pledged to immediately go to the aid of Poland in the event of aggression by Nazi Germany.

In 1945, Gen. Dwight Eisenhower issued instructions to the fleeing German army on how to surrender.

Ten years ago—The body of an American woman who had been slain by Iranian desert bandits was found. She had disappeared more than a week before when two jeeps carrying the woman, her husband, an American friend and two Iranian drivers were attacked in a desert area in southeastern Iran. The bodies of the four men were found the next day, stripped of all valuables.

Five years ago — A tornado cut through the town of Milton, Fla., taking the lives of at least 15 persons.

One year ago — President Johnson said more American troops would be sent to Vietnam "from time to time," but did not say how many more.

New Industry and Expansion in Sikeston

Schevelle Home Manufacturing Corporation, a new Sikeston industry, is one of 134 new manufacturing plants locating in Missouri during 1966. The company manufactures mobile homes.

Other new manufacturing enterprises coming to Southeast Missouri during the year were Caruthersville Shipyard Inc., Caruthersville; American Greeting Card Company, Cape Girardeau; Shirrell Ready Mix Company, Inc., Advance; Inland Shoe Manufacturing Company, Parma; Dow Chemical Company, Cape Girardeau; and Silsco, Inc., Poplar Bluff.

Sikeston also figured in industrial expansion with the enlargement of the Canvas Products Company. Other manufacturers in Southeast Missouri which broadened their base of operations were H.W. Gossard Company, Poplar Bluff; and International Hat Company, Dexter.

According to the Missouri Division of Commerce and Industrial Development in Jefferson City, Missouri acquired 134 new manufacturing plants during the year while 168 manufacturers announced expansion of their operations in the state.

The number of new plants moving into Missouri plus the number of present plant expansions resulted in a record-breaking high of more than 25,500 new jobs being created. This figure exceeded by more than 5,000 the new jobs announced during 1965.

It is expected that these new jobs will add in excess of $144 million to the state's annual manufacturing payroll. While many small communities acquired new companies last year the report shows that approximately four times more new jobs were announced in the four metropolitan areas of St. Louis, Kansas City, Springfield and St. Joseph than in outstate Missouri.

Investments in new and expanding industries last year soared to $138 million in construction of 8.2 million square feet of new manufacturing space. Statistics show that two-thirds of the new and expanding construction took place in the four metropolitan areas.

The 134 new manufactures provided 10,583 new jobs and the 168 expansions announced, opened jobs for 15,014 additional people. Investments in new plants amounted to $63,970,376 and expansions of present facilities accounted for an expenditure of almost $75 million.

There were many multi-million dollar developments in the industrial field announced in Missouri during 1966. Noteworthy among the list was the announcement that Zenith Radio Corporation would construct a plant in Springfield for the manufacture of both black and white and color television sets. The installation will cost more than $10 million and contain more than 650,000 square feet of floor space. When in full production the plant will employ approximately 4,000 persons.

The 3-M Company, with one plant under construction at Springfield, has plans for an additional one at Nevada. The combined installations will mean an investment of more than $17 million.

On the other side of the state Donaldson Company, Inc., announced plans to build a new plant at Kirksville. The new facility will cost about $1,250,000 and contain 125,000 square feet of floor space.

Expansion of present industry in Missouri during 1966 included an announcement by Von Hoffman Press, Inc., to increase production in Jefferson City by 50 per cent. This will entail the expenditure of about $3 million for a new plant to contain 250,000 square feet. In Kansas City the Sealright Company, Inc., announced a new plant would be built to cost one-million dollars. In St. Louis the Monsanto Chemical Company announced major expansions. At the Queeny plant, in that city, the company expanded production of maleic anhydride by 25-million pounds annually. It was already the world's largest producer of the chemical. At the St. Charles county plant the company announced increased silicon materials production by 50 percent in March and a second 50 percent was announced in November.

Throughout 1966 several Missouri manufacturers announced large increases in employment. Among the largest increases were the McDonnell Company and Ford Motor Company in St. Louis and the Remington Arms Company in Independence. These three companies alone accounted for more than 10,000 new jobs being created in Missouri last year by the expansion of their production facilities.

Rabbit Bids To Rescind Convention

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Rep. Richard J. Rabbit, D-St. Louis, said Wednesday he will introduce a resolution calling on the Missouri General Assembly to rescind its 1965 action asking Congress to call a constitutional convention to consider apportionment of state legislatures.

Rabbit, the majority floor leader in the House, said he would offer the resolution next Wednesday when the House reconvenes after an Easter recess.

An Illinois legislator, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Troy, announced Tuesday in Springfield that he had written letters to legislative leaders in 32 states asking that they rescind resolutions calling on Congress for the constitutional convention. Rabbit said he had been considering the resolution before hearing of Simon's announcement.

"I had come to the conclusion that the resolution asking Congress to call a convention to consider amending the Constitution to permit bicameral state legislatures to apportion one house on a basis other than population could open the door wide to constitutional revision," Rabbit said.

Rabbit said he felt such a convention might result in the federal Constitution being completely sabotaged. "I believe it would be dangerous at this time and we might find some of our basic freedoms scrapped," he said.

If two more states adopt the resolution it would be sufficient for Congress to call a convention which could result in overturning the U. S. Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote ruling.

New Industry and Expansion in Sikeston

Schevelle Home Manufacturing Corporation, a new Sikeston industry, is one of 134 new manufacturing plants locating in Missouri during 1966. The company manufactures mobile homes.

Other new manufacturing enterprises coming to Southeast Missouri during the year were Caruthersville Shipyard Inc., Caruthersville; American Greeting Card Company, Cape Girardeau; Shirrell Ready Mix Company, Inc., Advance; Inland Shoe Manufacturing Company, Parma; Dow Chemical Company, Cape Girardeau; and Silsco, Inc., Poplar Bluff.

Sikeston also figured in industrial expansion with the enlargement of the Canvas Products Company. Other manufacturers in Southeast Missouri which broadened their base of operations were H.W. Gossard Company, Poplar Bluff; and International Hat Company, Dexter.

According to the Missouri Division of Commerce and Industrial Development in Jefferson City, Missouri acquired 134 new manufacturing plants during the year while 168 manufacturers announced expansion of their operations in the state.

The number of new plants moving into Missouri plus the number of present plant expansions resulted in a record-breaking high of more than 25,500 new jobs being created. This figure exceeded by more than 5,000 the new jobs announced during 1965.

It is expected that these new jobs will add in excess of $144 million to the state's annual manufacturing payroll. While many small communities acquired new companies last year the report shows that approximately four times more new jobs were announced in the four metropolitan areas of St. Louis, Kansas City, Springfield and St. Joseph than in outstate Missouri.

Investments in new and expanding industries last year soared to $138 million in construction of 8.2 million square feet of new manufacturing space. Statistics show that two-thirds of the new and expanding construction took place in the four metropolitan areas.

The 134 new manufactures provided 10,583 new jobs and the 168 expansions announced, opened jobs for 15,014 additional people. Investments in new plants amounted to $63,970,376 and expansions of present facilities accounted for an expenditure of almost $75 million.

There were many multi-million dollar developments in the industrial field announced in Missouri during 1966. Noteworthy among the list was the announcement that Zenith Radio Corporation would construct a plant in Springfield for the manufacture of both black and white and color television sets. The installation will cost more than $10 million and contain more than 650,000 square feet of floor space. When in full production the plant will employ approximately 4,000 persons.

The 3-M Company, with one plant under construction at Springfield, has plans for an additional one at Nevada. The combined installations will mean an investment of more than $17 million.

On the other side of the state Donaldson Company, Inc., announced plans to build a new plant at Kirksville. The new facility will cost about $1,250,000 and contain 125,000 square feet of floor space.

Expansion of present industry in Missouri during 1966 included an announcement by Von Hoffman Press, Inc., to increase production in Jefferson City by 50 per cent. This will entail the expenditure of about $3 million for a new plant to contain 250,000 square feet. In Kansas City the Sealright Company, Inc., announced a new plant would be built to cost one-million dollars. In St. Louis the Monsanto Chemical Company announced major expansions. At the Queeny plant, in that city, the company expanded production of maleic anhydride by 25-million pounds annually. It was already the world's largest producer of the chemical. At the St. Charles county plant the company announced increased silicon materials production by 50 percent in March and a second 50 percent was announced in November.

Throughout 1966 several Missouri manufacturers announced large increases in employment. Among the largest increases were the McDonnell Company and Ford Motor Company in St. Louis and the Remington Arms Company in Independence. These three companies alone accounted for more than 10,000 new jobs being created in Missouri last year by the expansion of their production facilities.

Rabbit Bids To Rescind Convention

ST. LOUIS (AP) - Rep. Richard J. Rabbit, D-St. Louis, said Wednesday he will introduce a resolution calling on the Missouri General Assembly to rescind its 1965 action asking Congress to call a constitutional convention to consider apportionment of state legislatures.

Rabbit, the majority floor leader in the House, said he would offer the resolution next Wednesday when the House reconvenes after an Easter recess.

An Illinois legislator, Sen. Paul Simon, D-Troy, announced Tuesday in Springfield that he had written letters to legislative leaders in 32 states asking that they rescind resolutions calling on Congress for the constitutional convention. Rabbit said he had been considering the resolution before hearing of Simon's announcement.

"I had come to the conclusion that the resolution asking Congress to call a convention to consider amending the Constitution to permit bicameral state legislatures to apportion one house on a basis other than population could open the door wide to constitutional revision," Rabbit said.

Rabbit said he felt such a convention might result in the federal Constitution being completely sabotaged. "I believe it would be dangerous at this time and we might find some of our basic freedoms scrapped," he said.

If two more states adopt the resolution it would be sufficient for Congress to call a convention which could result in overturning the U. S. Supreme Court's one-man, one-vote ruling.
